ARREST MRS. EATON

SAYS NEW HAVEN HAS NO CASH

During a general discussion on the railroad situation in Massachusetts before the Legislative Committee on Railroads today, William H. Coolidge, legislative counsel for the New Haven and Boston & Maine railroads, made the statement that the New Haven road did not have money enough to pay its debts. In answer to a question, Attorney Coolidge said:

We haven't got any money even to pay our bills with, not to speak about being able to make improvements in taking the expenditure of large amounts.

Our railroad has capital amounting to approximately a billion dollars, but we haven't any cash to pay all the necessary bills, and we've got to be given some way to get the money. We have a floating debt of $60,000,000. This must be paid off before we can make any improvements.

The Legislature, if it wants to treat us fairly, should pass some bill to enable us to issue securities for the purpose of enabling us to pay our debts.

Attorney Coolidge said that the decline in the stock of the two roads was due to the general opposition and criticism of railroad development and to the restrictive State laws on the issuance of securities.

MELLEN SOON TO GO TO MAKE ROOM FOR ELLIOTT, IS REPORT

Definite report that Charles S. Mellen is to retire as president of the New Haven road reached Boston today from New York. The report was promptly denied by the New Haven officials at the South Station. Mr. Mellen left Boston yesterday. The New York dispatch says:

The voluntary retirement of Charles S. Mellen as president and chairman of the board of directors of the New Haven Railroad will occur immediately after some definite action results from the indictment against him, in which he is charged with violation of the Sherman anti-trust law.

This was the report current in banking circles today, which was given further strength by the rumor that the services of Howard Elliott, now president of the Northern Pacific Railroad, had been engaged by New York, New Haven & Hartford people, and that Elliott was to succeed Mellen.

Dividend May Be Cut.

The report was current today that the New Haven road would soon put into effect a lower dividend rate for the purpose of giving the road a large working capital.

Mr. Mellen gave out an interview on Saturday at New Haven in which he declared that the B. & M. dividend must be cut, and that a cut of 2 per cent. in the New Haven dividend might also be expected.

Elliott Harvard Overseer.

The suggestion that Howard Elliott, president of the Northern Pacific Railroad, may succeed Mellen as head of the Boston & Maine and New Haven roads came originally from Boston, where Elliott is especially friendly with leading banking interests.

He graduated from Harvard in 1881 and is an overseer of the university. He would have, his friends say, as president of the New Haven, the confidence of the New England bankers, as he is closely associated socially and in a business way with men of the Storrow and Perkins and Higginson group.

Abandons Plans for Hotel.

As a result of the troubles of the Boston & Maine, it was announced today by the Boston News Bureau, the plans for a hotel and scenic railway on Mt. Washington have been abandoned, and work must cease. The News Bureau blames the general troubles of the Boston & Maine to the attacks on the road and its management.

Dr. Eliot Leading for Appointment to British Post

WASHINGTON, March 20.—Charles W. Eliot, president emeritus of Harvard, it was learned at the White House today, is the leading probability for ambassador to the court of St. James.

While other names are being considered by President Wilson, among them former Governor David R. Francis of Missouri, Judge George Gray of Delaware, and Thomas Nelson Page of Virginia, it is understood President Eliot can have the post if he wishes it.

Overtures have been made to him and President Wilson is awaiting a reply.

REPORT MGR. O'CALLAGHAN HOLDING OWN

Dr. P. J. Timmins just after leaving he bedside of Rt. Rev Mgr. Denis O'Callaghan, rector of St. Augustine's Church, South Boston, said:

Mgr. O'Callaghan is holding his own and appears a little brighter this morning than he has for several days.

Although he has been unconscious much of the time, this morning he was able to converse a little and to recognize those about him.

Mgr. O'Callaghan is unconscious most of the time, but was able to recognize Cardinal O'Connell when the latter called upon him to extend his blessing and wish him a speedy recovery.

The patient is said to have spent a comfortable night, but his condition today was not reassuring. He was seventy-two years old Tuesday, and on account of his advanced age it is thought he is physically unable to rally from the complicated malady from which he is suffering.

"KID CARTER" TO BE TRIED MONDAY

James B. Jennings, known as "Young Kid Carter," who killed William H. McPherson, by shooting him, in a South End saloon on January 1, will be placed on trial for his life next Monday, District Attorney Pelletier will appear for the government while Melvin B. Breath will appear for Carter. Dr. Edward B. Lane, alienist, who was asked to examine Jennings, reported today that it was impossible to form a satisfactory opinion as to his mental condition, because of his refusal to answer any questions. Dr. Lane recommended that a commission of alienists be appointed.

48-HOUR WEEK BILL REPORTED

One of the most drastic labor measures ever presented to the Legislature, providing an eight-hour day and a forty-eight-hour week for employes of all industrial establishments operated either day or night, was favorably reported this afternoon by the legislative Committee on Labor. The bill was presented upon the petition of Charles S. Bird, Progressive candidate for Governor last Fall.

WOMAN ACCUSED OF ADMIRAL'S DEATH

This is Mrs. Jennie May Harrison Eaton, widow of Admiral Joseph G. Eaton, who was arrested today charged with the murder of her husband.

WILSON QUITS BECAUSE ANGRY AT PRESIDENT

WASHINGTON, March 20.—Assistant Secretary of State Huntington Wilson resigned today. The resignation was accepted immediately by President Wilson.

The Chinese policy as outlined by President Wilson in his recent statement is given as the reason for the resignation.

Mr. Wilson also objected to the action of President Wilson in giving his statement on the Chinese question to the newspapers without taking the acting Secretary into his confidence. His letter to the President read in part:

When I consented, at the request of Mr. Bryan and in deference to what I understood to be your wishes, to continue in office for these few weeks longer, I believe I was justified in assuming that there would be no radical departure from the practice of this and other countries whereby the knowledge and experience of the various officials of the foreign office is made use of in the study of great questions of foreign policy.

I had no reason to suppose that the officials on duty in the Department of State would learn first from the newspapers of a declaration of policy which, I think, shows on its face the inadequacy of the consideration given to the facts and theories involved in the failure clearly to apprehend the motives leading to and the purposes of the policy superseded.

I had not reason to suppose that the fate of negotiations which so long had had the studious attention of the foreign offices of six great powers would be abruptly determined with such quite unnecessary haste and in so unusual a manner. These methods, against which I respectfully protest, I feel vitiate my understanding with Mr. Bryan and completely relieve me of any further obligation in the premises.

The Charge Against Mrs. Eaton

Here is the full text of the complaint which charges Mrs. Eaton with the murder of her husband, Rear Admiral Joseph G. Eaton:

Jennie M. Eaton of the town of Norwell and County of Plymouth did on the seventh day of March, in the said town of Norwell, wilfully, maliciously, feloniously and with malice aforethought poison by arsenic Joseph G. Eaton, of the said town of Norwell, and in the manner aforesaid did kill and murder the said Joseph G. Eaton against the peace of the Commonwealth and its statutes in that case made and provided.

The complaint is signed by State Officer John H. Scott and is attested by H. L. Pratt on the twentieth day of March.

CARDINAL BLESSES HOLY OILS FOR USE ON SICK AND DYING

Cardinal O'Connell officiated today in the Cathedral of the Holy Cross at the solemn ceremony on Holy Thursday, of the blessing of holy oils, to be used in anointing the sick and dying during the coming year. The Cardinal was assisted by priests of the Cathedral, of St. Cecilia's Church and of St. John's Seminary, Brighton.

During the solemn pontifical mass the Rev. Thomas R. McCoy of the Cathedral was assistant priest, the Rev. M. J. Scanlan, deacon of honor, and the Rev. James J. Redican, sub-deacon of honor. The deacon was the Rev. Neil J. Cronin, while the Rev. A. J. Hickey was sub-deacon, with the Rt. Rev. Mgr. M. J. Splaine, assisted by the Rev William B. Finigan, as master of ceremonies.

Cardinal O'Connell will preside this evening at Tremont Temple in the Cathedral and again tomorrow.

"I'm Not Married to Maxine Elliott," Declares Wilding

LONDON, March 20.—A. F. Wilding, the English tennis champion, was astonished when he was asked today if the report from Nice that he had been married there to Maxine Elliott were true.

"Good God!" exclaimed Mr. Wilding after a pause, "how do such lies get abroad? I am not married to Miss Elliott. This report is certainly news to me. I have been in Riviera playing tennis and Miss Elliott was at Nice, but I assure you I am still enjoying single blessedness."

ACCUSED OF POISONING

MRS. JENNIE MAY HARRISON EATON WAS ARRESTED TODAY FOR MURDER IN POISONING HER HUSBAND, REAR ADMIRAL JOSEPH GILES EATON, THE RETIRED NAVAL OFFICER OF ASSINIPPI VILLAGE OF WEST NORWELL, WHOSE DEATH HAS BEEN UNDER INVESTIGATION SINCE MARCH 8.

Mrs. Eaton was taken from her home in Assinippi at 9:40 by two officers, who conveyed her to Hingham in an automobile.

She was arraigned before Special Justice Edward B. Pratt in the Hingham session of the Second Plymouth District Court.

Her attorney, Francis J. Geogan, who has recently come in the case, waived the reading of the complaint and entered a plea of not guilty for his client.

Mrs. Eaton was held without bail for a continued hearing on Friday, March 28, and was committed to Plymouth Jail until that time.

She was taken to jail as soon as the commitment papers were made out.

Mrs. Eaton was brought into the courtroom weeping, but she regained her self-command by a heroic effort when she faced the court gathering. Throughout the arraignment she held her head high, looked straight ahead and made no sign.

WOMAN IS QUICKLY ARRAIGNED.

The arraignment was in open court. The inquest, which had been begun in secret session, was adjourned indefinitely, and the courtroom doors were opened at 11:53 for the reporters and what few spectators happened to be on hand.

The reporters had just been informed of the arrest by District Attorney Albert F. Barker in the following statement:

Mrs. Eaton is not in the inquest. She is now under arrest for the murder of her husband.

Admiral Joseph Giles Eaton did not die a natural death.

This fact was communicated to me by Professor Whitney of Harvard College in a preliminary verbal report on March 10.

This fact was known to the officers who worked on the case since that time. Certain peculiar features of the case made it impossible for the authorities to communicate that fact to the public.

At the present time we are unable to say where the poison was bought.

Poison Was Form of Arsenic.

"What was the poison," the District Attorney was asked.

"Some form of arsenic," he replied.

After their thirteen consecutive days of investigation the Plymouth County authori-

HUNTINGTON WILSON QUITS DEPARTMENT

WASHINGTON, March 20.—Assistant Secretary of State Huntington Wilson resigned today. The resignation was accepted immediately by President Wilson. The Chinese policy as outlined by President Wilson in his recent statement is given as the reason for the resignation.

REVERE TO CONTINUE ITS TOWN MORGUE, WITH A. V. SANBORN IN CHARGE

Revere will continue to maintain a town morgue. The keeper will be Arthur V. Sanborn, a Revere undertaker. He was elected keeper at last night's session of the Board of Selectmen. Before the vote confirming his appointment was put, however, there was a sharp debate between Chairman White of the board and Selectman Farrell, both undertakers. Gossips in the town today say there is a political move in the retention of the morgue, which is located in the police station.

Selectman Farrell, looking Chairman White straight in the eye, moved that Arthur V. Sanborn be appointed keeper of the town morgue.

"We have no town morgue," said Chairman White.

"This is the only town in Massachusetts that has a morgue," interrupted Selectman Farrell, "and it is located in the police station. (A roar of laughter and much giggling from those present.)

Chairman White pounded his gavel for order. Sergeant William E. Tappan shouted to the crowd to be quiet or else they would have to leave the hall.

"Our town morgue is in the emergency room of the police station," continued Selectman Farrell. (A voice in the crowd informed the newspaper men that it was near this room that Selectman Vincent got the gruelling that caused him to shift his vote recently on the chairmanship and superintendent of streets propositions. This caused more laughter.)

Here Chairman White called Selectman Farrell's attention to the fact that Revere was not part of Suffolk County, and that the town morgue was known as the North Grove Street Morgue, in the West End of Boston. He did not think, considering this fact, that he ought to put the motion. He did, though, when Selectman Hartung told him to. And the "town morgue" (in Revere) was retained, with Sanborn as keeper.

Added interest was attached to last night's meeting of the Selectmen by the presence of Attorney William R. Scharton, counsel for "Dakota Dan." Arthur G. McVey, another lawyer, accompanied Scharton. They were present to represent Mrs. Arthur Norris in case Alexander Rampell, an automobile owner, made good his threats to show that she (Mrs. Norris) paid somebody for the privilege of conducting an automobile stand. Rampell, at a previous meeting, alleged that Mrs. Norris was influencing people to take his stand away.

Vincent at Session.

Prior to the opening of the meeting Acting Police Chief Claire P. Cheney came into the room, resplendent with gold lace. Superintendent of Streets Fitzgerald was another visitor to the room. He wore a brown business suit, greeted friends in the audience and did a Dr. Jekyll and Hyde act in facial contortions when he saw several of his late opponents for his new position. Fitzgerald told several town officials he heard Selectman Hartung, Republican, wanted to see him.

By this time each of the five Selectmen, in turn, entered the room. Among them was Selectman Louis K. Vincent, Republican, looking the picture of health.

Before putting the motion Chairman White read a letter from P. B. Flynn, withdrawing his objection to the stand.

Selectman Hubbard then moved that Alexander Rampell be granted a permit to conduct an automobile stand in front of Flynn's new building, on the northerly side of Shirley avenue. Before the vote was taken Selectman Vincent was summoned on the phone. Later each Selectman voted in favor of granting Rampell the permit.

Rampell said later to a reporter:

I had the goods. I was ready for them. Since the last meeting and the publication of my charges, I was asked by different parties to keep quiet.

Before the meeting started I was badgered in the corridors by Mrs. Norris' brothers, John McGinnis and William McGinnis, and John Roderick, her brother-in-law.

The fact that Scharton is a lawyer did not fraze me. I may not have the legal training, but I had the goods to back up those graft charges in my pocket. I guess they didn't want to see or hear about them.

Next in order came the granting of licenses. Chairman White and Selectman Hubbard conversed for a second, and then summoned Alexander Rampell for consultation. Mrs. Norris, who was seated inside the enclosure, looked on. Everybody expected to hear Rampell speak on his charges of "graft," made at the previous meeting.

Take Up Auto License.

Chairman White said the first matter for consideration would be the granting of a hearing to petitioners for automobile licenses. All eyes were on Attorney Scharton and Rampell.

Chairman White asked Rampell if he wished to speak. Rampell, his face ashen pale, said:

"I have given this matter much thought since the last meeting of the board, and I am perfectly willing to abide by your decision in the matter. I did not come here to hear myself talk."

With that Rampell walked toward the side door. Selectman Hubbard moved that a permit be granted to maintain an automobile stand at the Spa, southerly side of Shirley avenue.

An Unfailing Prescription for Kidneys and Bladder

The following simple prescription has proven one of the best ever known for weak, deranged kidneys or bladder: Get six ounces good pure gin, add to it one-half ounce Murax Compound, one-half ounce fluid extract Buchu. Take one to two teaspoonfuls of this mixture after each meal and at bed time. It is surprising how quickly this stops backache, rheumatic pains in the joints, dizziness, pains in the groin, or other frequent annoying symptoms that are well known. For best results, good pure gin should be used in this prescription, also genuine Murax Compound, which comes only in sealed wooden tubes. Any substitute will not work so well. Almost any good druggist has these ingredients. Anyone can mix.

Bright's disease, chronic rheumatism or dread diabetes come from neglected kidneys. Treatment should be given at first sign of disorder to avoid the serious forms of kidney disease.—Advertisement.

LITTLE waif who is awaiting fate at the Relief Hospital. This mite of a girl has been abandoned three times and is doomed as a State ward unless claimed by parents now unknown.

HUNT PARENTS OF CHILD THRICE ABANDONED

Obsessed by the vain task of trying to force a tiny pink toe into her tiny mouth, a baby girl today lolls about on a cot at the Relief Hospital blissfully ignorant she has thrice been abandoned, and the police of two States are seeking her father and mother.

The child was given into the care of the hospital authorities by Patrolman William Walsh of the Hanover street station, and has had quite an eventful career in her three or four months' existence. Walsh is on duty at the North Station, and received the child and a brief sketch of her life from Mrs. Susan McDonald of No. 639 Massachusetts avenue, Lexington.

Mrs. McDonald told the police she was in the North Station waiting for a train when she was approached by a woman carrying the child and a suit case filled with infant's clothes. The woman handed Mrs. McDonald the child and dropped the suit case at her feet. Before Mrs. McDonald could recover from her surprise the woman said her name was Mrs. Fred L. Babb and that she came from Mexico, Me.

The child, she said, was left at her home by a man who said his wife had died, and he wanted to leave the child with her until he returned.

That was two months ago. The man did not come back and Mrs. Babb vowed she had enough children of her own to take care of. Before leaving she said the child's name was Harriet Patience Watters and handed Mrs. McDonald a card bearing the names of Mrs. Clara M. Babb and Miss Blanch A. Mosher, Strong place, Baptist Church, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Mrs. McDonald was at a loss what to do with the baby until Patrolman Walsh appeared. By this time Mrs. Babb had disappeared and Walsh took the baby to the hospital. If the parents of the child are not found today the infant will probably be turned over to the State Board of Charities.

He was locked up charged with breaking and entering.

King was passing the store when he noticed the door open. He saw a man within. Not knowing how many more there might be, he drew his revolver. The man refused to come out until he had fired one shot.

Says Mrs. Harris Talked to Photos, Calling Them 'Duke'

That her mother-in-law, Mrs. Emma J. Harris, talked to photographic portraits of relatives, addressing them as "duke" and "duchess" and that she was attempted suicide by inhaling illuminating gas, was testified to by Mrs. Jane C. Harris of No. 1517 Beacon street, Brookline, before Judge Hammond and a jury in the Superior Session of the Norfolk County Court today.

Mrs. Jane Harris, who is the wife and guardian of William P. Harris, now an inmate of the Waverly Asylum, has brought suit to have set aside her mother-in-law's will. The instrument which was drawn March 10, 1910, leaves $5,000 in trust for William P. Harris, a son by her first marriage. The remainder of the estate, about $450,000, is left to Alonzo Harris, the testator's second husband.

Mrs. Jane Harris alleges that her mother-in-law was of unsound mind when she drew the will and also that undue influence was used.

Mrs. Jane Harris related at great length today many strange acts of her mother-in-law.

She Darkened Her Gray Hair

A Kansas City Lady Darkened Her Gray Hair and Stimulated Its Growth by a Simple Home Process.

She Tells How She Did It.

Mrs. A. Biggam, a well known resident of Kansas City, Mo., who darkened her gray hair by a simple home process, made the following statement: "Any lady or gentleman can darken their gray or faded hair, stimulate its growth and makes it soft and glossy with this simple recipe, which they can mix at home. To half pint of water add 1 oz. of bay rum, 1 small box of Barbo Compound and ½ oz. of glycerine. These ingredients can be purchased at any drug store at very little cost. Apply to the hair every other day until the gray hair is darkened sufficiently, then every two weeks. This mixture relieves any scalp troubles and is excellent for dandruff and falling hair. It does not stain the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off. It will make a gray-haired person look 10 to 20 years younger."—Advertisement.

URGE NO SEAT, NO FARE SLOGAN AT 'L' PROTEST

Residents of Dorchester today discussed with keen interest the statements made by Dr. George Galvin of Somerville, one of the principal speakers at a "town meeting" held by the citizens of Dorchester Centre in Dorchester High School hall. The purpose of the meeting was to further the Thomas A. Nyland bill for the appointment of a committee of five to investigate the Boston Elevated. Dorchester wants better car service.

Dr. Galvin referred to the present Massachusetts Legislature as a "cesspool of corruption," and declared that he did not feel that the bill would pass. He charged that the committee handling the measure is unfavorable to it.

Former Senator Michael Murray of Dorchester presided. Those speaking besides Dr. Galvin were: Thomas A. Nyland, Norman Marshall, Representative John A. Anderson, Representative Lewis R. Sullivan, Representative Joseph G. Benson, Cornelius Desmond, John H. Duffy of the Mattapan Civic Improvement Association, and a number of the men in the audience.

"Capacity Only Limit."

Pigs are better cared for than people traveling on some transportation lines in Massachusetts. There is a statute that forbids putting more than a certain number of hogs in one car. If there is one too many the company is liable to a fine. The number of people that may be packed into a trolley car is apparently limited only by its capacity, Chairman Murray said.

We are here to further a bill that the Legislature has in its hands at the present for the appointment of a commission of five men to look into the affairs of the Boston Elevated, to investigate its business methods and in general to see if the taxpayers are getting from the Elevated what they are paying for. The city gives the road the right to use its streets.

All we ask is that we get what we believe is due us. Men working for the road tell me that the company is running less cars than it did fifteen years ago. I believe that the changes in time of cars should be borne in the cars.

Dr. Galvin said:

Mr. Chairman and victims of the Boston Elevated: The State House is a cesspool of corruption and I do not expect to see this bill pass, and believe it never will. In the first place the Elevated has not the spirit to give a fair account of its finances. The hearing before the committee on street railways the past week was a farce. Honest and sincere people go to them with honest bills.

"Care Are Germ-Laden."

Certain legislators apparently aim to confuse the citizens who speak at the State House. Such conditions on the railroads will exist until the people own the roads and not the roads own the people. The cars today are germ-laden. No one can escape from the effects. But what does the corporation care for the thousands and thousands made ill yearly by riding in these cars from Dorchester to Boston. Cemeteries as large as Forest Hills would not accommodate all the bodies of the victims of the crowded cars, if the truth were known.

The charter was given the Boston Elevated for nothing and is really worth millions. It is time, in my judgment, that the people should wake up, and elect men to office who will serve them and not the railroads.

Now, our theme is this, and the sooner it is worked out the better: "NO SEAT, NO FARE." Form a league and let that be its motto. Be honest to self and family but never spare a corporation.

Dr. Galvin's attack on the Legislature was sharply denounced by Representatives Benson and Anderson. Both declared emphatically that the Legislature is not a "cesspool of corruption" and that just the opposite is true of the body of lawmakers on Beacon Hill.

MRS. NORMAN MASON, who was Miss Edith Barnes, the lyric soprano of the Boston Opera Company, who was quietly married to young business man she met in Paris. They will live in Buenos Ayres.

The Talented Singer Has Chosen Between an Opera Career and Matrimony. Cupid Won.

Miss Edith Barns, the brilliant young lyric soprano of the Boston Opera Company, was quietly married at the home of her mother, Mrs. Barron F. Barnes of No. 541 Commonwealth avenue, yesterday afternoon, and departed today for Buenos Ayres with her husband, Norman Mason of Chicago.

The members of the Boston Opera Company knew nothing of the intended marriage of the young star.

Edith Barnes has been declared by the Boston critics to be the most promising lyric soprano in the Boston Opera House, and when she sang the part of Zerlina in "Don Giovanni" a few weeks ago she won great applause.

She has given up her career on the opera stage and is travelling to the other side of the equator with her young husband, who has just been appointed manager of an American advertising business which is to be established in the Argentine capital.

Loss to Boston Opera.

Her loss will be a blow to the Boston Opera Company, for big things had been planned for her for next season.

Miss Barnes created a sensation when she went upon the opera stage, for she was prominent in Boston society and her family is very well known in Back Bay circles. She adopted an opera career against the desires of her family, but her extraordinary success had in part reconciled them to the situation.

Mr. Mason met Miss Barnes in Paris last Summer. He had been a newspaper man, but the discovery of an unusual tenor voice led him to go to Paris for study. Miss Barnes was also studying in the French capital and the romance began there.

When the Boston opera season drew Miss Barnes back to Boston Mr. Mason dropped his studies to follow her here, and during the Winter has been her escort frequently. During the present season Miss Barnes had an astounding success in Montreal and in Boston. The climax came when she was permitted to sing Zerlina, a part that only Geraldine Farrar and Alice Nielson had been heard in recently. She had great success in the role.

Cupid vs. Career.

In the meantime, Mason had abandoned his operatic ambitions for love, and set about looking for a business opening. He received the Buenos Ayres appointment, and then it was for Miss Barnes to choose between her career and Cupid.

The wedding was very quiet. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Dr. Sewell of Worcester, and there were no guests. The young couple started immediately for New York, and sail for Buenos Ayres on Saturday.

Mrs. Barnes, mother of the bride, made the following statement:

"Mr. Mason is a very charming young man and I am personally much better pleased to have my daughter a happy and contented wife with a good man to care for her than appearing in public upon the opera stage. I never quite approved of her grand opera career, but her voice was so extraordinary that we did not feel justified in preventing it. Although my daughter is going very far away, I am sure she will be very happy."

Henry Russell, director of the Boston Opera, said:

"Miss Barnes was one of our most efficient young artists. We are sorry to lose her."

MAN IS FOUND DEAD IN HOTEL

Henry Hughes, aged twenty-five years and single, was found dead in bed in his room early today, at the Hilton House, No. 1.489 Washington street, South End.

Henry A. Jackson, another lodger, heard Hughes groaning and he called a policeman. Together they forced the door and as Hughes was gasping his last. Illness from which he had suffered for some time is believed to have caused Hughes' death.

DRESSMAKERS' STRIKE DELAYS EASTER GOWNS

Nine hundred men and women, members of the Boston Ladies' Tailors and Dressmakers' Union 36, went on strike today. Union 36, which was declared today, continues, it was said today.

The strike was called in the height of the Easter rush. In every shop affected by the strike there has been a rush of work, most of which is still unfinished.

The strike was called at the most strategic moment in the trade, when the tailor's shops are crowded with work that would tax the help even with the Easter increase of employees.

The employes demand better conditions, with increase of pay, and equitable arrangements for overtime work.

Before the strike was an hour old its leaders claimed that half of the sixty-two shops involved had signified their willingness to grant the demands.

Dispatches received today by leaders of the United Garment Workers' strike 2,500 employes being out, state that those workers who went to New York Saturday night and Monday have found employment.

AUERBACH MAKES PLEA FOR PURER CANDY AT CASSIDY BILL HEARING

"The child that toddles into a store to buy a penny stick of candy is often poisoned by it; the man who pays 80 cents for candy in Boston buys a mess," declared Attorney Junius T. Auerbach before the legislative Co. mittee on Health at a hearing in Room 430 today. The hearing was on the bill introduced through the efforts of Harry P. Cassidy, the AMERICAN'S pure food expert.

The intention of the bill is to protect the people of the commonwealth against candy in which glucose is used in place, of sugar, ethereal flavors in place of pure fruit chocolate covering.

Mr. Cassidy believes that if people are willing to buy candy made after this fashion, they are at least entitled to know what they are getting and his bill will compel manufacturers who use substitutes as stated, to label their goods. The bill provides a fine of not more than $500 or less than $100 for its violations.

Auerbach Turns the Laugh.

Room 436 was crowded with candy manufacturers and representatives of every candy manufacturers' associations. Attorney Charles R. Jones appeared for the candymakers.

Mr. Cassidy had a trunk full of samples of jellies and candies in which substitutes had been used. At Attorney Auerbach's remark about the "man who buys eighty-cent candy" there was loud laughter from the candymakers. Turning to the committee, Attorney Auerbach said:

They may laugh but I want to say gentlemen of the committee that the president of the Candy Makers' Association is now in the criminal court right here in Boston upon a charge of using arsenic in his candy, and another member of the association was in court only recently for using shellac in his candy.

Shellac is something you paint your house with.

In speaking in favor of the bill, Attorney Auerbach said:

It makes no difference whether you buy candy in the cheapest little place in Boston or in the fashionable candy shop where you pay 80 cents for candy. The people of Boston and other sections of the State have been deceived and deluded because they are not getting candy made from its principal ingredient—pure sugar.

Colored Fat on Outside.

Instead, they are getting candy made of glucose, with etheral flavors, instead of pure fruit flavors, and in the smaller candy shops and the five and ten-cent stores, where the candy is piled in the windows, the supposed chocolate covering is simply a colore grease that they get from the packing houses. It is known as stearine. There is no chocolate in it at all. It is indigestible and harmful.

The people buy it thinking they are getting chocolate. They are simply getting rendered fat on the outside and on the inside they are getting not the sugar we had in the old days in our candy, but glucose.

Glucose is a corn product. We are not here to say that it is not a good product. It is a good product. But when people buy 80-cent candy in Boston and when the child toddles into the store with a penny for a stick of candy, both ought to know at least what they are to receive for their money.

Fraud Upon Public.

When people buy in candy or in soda ices what they believe is pure fruit extracts, they ought to know that instead of getting pur efood juices they are getting other flavors substituted for them. This is a fraud upon the public and it ought to be stopped.

You have already stopped the use of arsenic, talc, iron rust and minerals in the making of food products for sale to the public. This was an excellent thing and now you should complete the work by stopping the use of substitutes in candy.

The great component part of candy is supposed to be pure sugar, but today glucose, ethereal flavors and Steerine take its place.

Now, we ought to stop this. If the people are to have glucose instead of sugar and they want to buy it, all right; but let the people be not deceived.

Candy sold today in Boston contains 60 per cent. of glucose. It is now a matter of chemistry and not candy making to supply the candy trade. Glucose costs about 2 cents a pound. Sugar costs much more.

No glucose was used in the manufacture of candy before 1882.

It is cheaper for the manufacturer, so he does it. For the health of the people the whole thing should be stopped.

Simple Life Rules Ban New Dances to Youth in Capital

WASHINGTON, March 20.—Washington children must temper their social activities and return to the simple life, if the local branch of the National Congress has its way. Young people in the families of the members received today cards bearing the following commands:

That all entertainments in our homes stop at 12 midnight, or earlier.

That the "nameless" dances not only be discouraged, but be forbidden in our homes and to our children.

That simplicity and modesty in dress distinguish our girls.

That we teach our sons that smoking during an entertainment planned for their pleasure is a discourtesy to the hostess and her other guests.

That we instruct our boys to end a social call at 10 or 10:30 o'clock.

To Prevent Baldness Scour the Scalp

Koller, the German scientist, says that in most cases of baldness everything points to a parasitic origin of the disease, consequently the best treatment is of anti-parasitic character.

The parasites that cause brittle and falling hair thrive an on unclean scalp. With Mother's Shampoo, the scalp can be scoured clean, yet its action is gentle and bland. It is a scientific formula that directly attacks these parasites. Dissolve a teaspoonful in a cup of hot water, wash the head, and then thoroughly rinse. Mother's Shampoo can be bought from any druggist at 25 cents a package of ten shampoos.

A clean scalp makes possible the healthy growth of thick and glossy hair. Dyeing the hair, even with the most harmless materials, and singeing the hair are both highly injurious.—Advertisement.

FLAT LENS ARCO LENS

The edges and reflections from the flat lenses can be very annoying.

Our Arco curved lenses eliminate these evils, while at the same time correction permits them to be set close to the eyes and are thus quite striking, affording protection from dust and flying particles and giving a very large range of clear vision.

Arco lenses are ground in my own prescription department, and are known to give relief when flat lenses failed, on account of the curvature of the eyes.

THE SHEPARD MILLINERY STORE

The Hats Appeal to the Hat Soul—The Dainty Gray-and-Rose Parlor Speaks to the Artistic Soul—Usually the Two Souls Are One

Yes, our Spring Millinery makes its appeal to the outside and the inside of every woman's head—and is gaining the business that surely comes through giving good service without the tax of exorbitant prices. The store that pleases its customers can please others equally well. Growth creates growth.

EVERY HAT WE SHOW has its claim to beauty and every price we ask has its unmistakable mark of thrift.

We are showing the latest of the world's styles—the Fashion world. Authoritative graces from the inner shrine where sit the creators to whose decisions in matters of Millinery all bow in acquiescence.

PRICES RANGE FROM $5.00 TO $45.00

Years ago a comic paper had a satirical cartoon upon small Hats—a maid following a woman down the aisle of a church bearing her Hat in a teaspoon.

There is a return of the older fashion, but never in Hat history were there such dainty bits of Headgear as shown this season.

For Hats and Bonnets of every imaginable sort, for every purpose of urban or rural use, expressing scores of fresh thoughts, examine the SHEPARD collection.

THE SHEPARD NEW STORE FOR CHILDREN AND MISSES

The main points about the new store are the STYLES, QUALITIES and PRICES of the goods. Let them monopolize your interest.

Results, as you see them, were mathematically planned. Not the glint of a guess went into the work.

A long procession of girls passed before us in mental review when we selected the garments. This little, slight girl must have something different from that tall or stout one; here's one that needs long lines and easy curves; that one is meant for fulness and fluffiness; another wants severe tailor effects. Haphazard choosing would have been disastrous. Exact calculation and nice discrimination alone could have compassed the display we now invite you to examine.

Have you fixed the children up for Easter? Heaps here to pick from.

$3.95—REPP DRESSES, pink and blue, new gored skirt, trimmed with braid and insertion; sizes 8 to 14 years.

$5.95—SERGE COATS, finished with pique collars and cuffs, new Spring models; sizes 2 to 6 years.

$9.95—COATS, made of serges, fancy mixtures; also checks, plain tailored and belted model; sizes 6 to 14 years.

The approach of Easter, the preparations for Spring wardrobes have lines that converge around our dainty Neckwear.

MRS. EATON IS ARRESTED FOR MURDER OF ADMIRAL

Widow Taken from Her Home at Assinippi and Charged with Death of Husband.

ties were able to strike quickly when the time came.

No warning was given to the public. The inquest session was to be resumed as usual at 10 o'clock.

But at 9:30 State Officer John Scott of Braintree and Deputy Sheriff John T. Condon of Rockland took Mrs. Eaton from her home and landed her at Hingham court house at 10 o'clock.

The widow was taken into Judge Pratt's private office and her personal counsel, Francis J. Geogan, was called from a case he was engaged on at Abington court house.

Meanwhile Clerk of Court Herbert L. Pratt—brother of Judge Pratt—was called to the courtroom. His presence had not been necessary for inquest proceedings. He arrived there at noon.

District Attorney Barker came out on the sidewalk at 11:30 and gave the first statement of the arrest.

The District Attorney did not go into details of getting a warrant, but it was assumed that this formality was arranged by Judge Pratt.

Dramatic Scene in Court.

Mrs. Eaton was still in Judge Pratt's office with her counsel.

When the inquest was adjourned and the courtroom doors were thrown open at 11:55, the reporters fairly tumbled in. They saw the court stenographer at his desk and Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Jacobs at Assinippi, inquest witnesses. Two or three Hingham people, scenting developments, hurried in.

Deputy Sheriff Condon, who has been a detective so far in the case, took the court officer's seat.

The door of Clerk Pratt's office—which is between Judge Pratt's office and the courtroom—opened.

Mrs. Jennie May Harrison Eaton—formerly a belle of Washington society and a connection of the late President Harrison—came in slowly, to answer to a charge of poisoning her second husband.

State Officer Scott—who was detective also in the case—walked just behind the accused.

In one hand Mrs. Eaton clutched a crumpled ball of white handkerchief.

Her eyes were reddened.

She had been crying.

She was crying, in fact, as she came through the door.

But, as she faced the staring onlookers, Mrs. Eaton made a superb effort at self-control.

Up went her head. She checked her tears. She compelled her facial muscles to repose until her rounded cheeks were without a line and her mouth was firm.

She is a large woman, this widow of the murdered naval commander. She is tall and of matronly figure. In her sombre black she was a striking figure—especially on such a sinister occasion.

Mrs. Eaton looked straight ahead. State Officer Scott indicated a place for her on the front settee, next to the bar enclosure. She seated herself.

Attorney Geogan took a seat by District Attorney Barker. State Officer Scott took the next seat beyond. Thus Mrs. Eaton was not guarded, in the sense of having someone sitting beside her.

Deputy Sheriff Condon stood up suddenly and said in formal tone.

"The Court."

All rose Special Justice Edward B. Pratt of Second Plymouth District Court entered through the door leading into Clerk Pratt's private office.

Judge Pratt was of solemn demeanor, befitting the grave nature of the case. It is seldom that one is arraigned for murder in Hingham. Ordinarily, too, the presiding judge of this court, George W. Kelley, would hear the case. But, as has been told, Judge Kelley was personal counsel for Mrs. Eaton and is now handling the probate matters of the family.

So the occasion was all the more unusual for Special Justice Pratt.

Pleads Not Guilty.

Clerk Pratt stood and called: "Jennie May Eaton——"

Attorney Geogan—"Your Honor, I waive the reading of the complaint and enter a plea of not guilty for the defendant."

District Attorney Barker and Attorney Geogan walked to the bench and talked for a minute with Judge Pratt. Then they went back and sat down.

Clerk Pratt rose again and said:

"Jennie May Eaton, your case stands continued until Friday, March 28, at 8:30 o'clock, in Hingham. You stand committed without bail to Plymouth jail."

There was a momentary silence.

Judge Pratt—"Is that all?"

District Attorney Barker, Clerk Pratt and Attorney Geogan nodded simultaneously.

Attorney Geogan walked over toward Mrs. Eaton and escorted her into Clerk Pratt's office, to wait while the commitment papers were being made out by Clerk Pratt and Deputy Sheriff Condon.

Mrs. Eaton walked out as she had entered, calm and erect, looking neither to right nor left.

As she sat in court she was face to face with Mr. and Mrs. Jacobs, her Assinippi neighbors. So far as recognition went the Jacobs couple might have been thin air.

With measured tread Mrs. Eaton walked from the settee to the clerk's private office. Attorney Geogan followed and the office door closed after them.

At 1 o'clock Mrs. Eaton was taken over the road to Plymouth jail in an automobile.

The manner in which Mrs. Eaton was taken from her home in Assinippi to Hingham courthouse was as mysterious as any other development has been in this case of mystery.

Constable L. Frank Hammond was on guard at the Eaton home on Washington street, having relieved Chief Walter Osborne of the Norwell police.

About 9 o'clock Mrs. Eaton could be seen, clad in a blue wrapper, feeding the chickens and attending to a few other duties about the yard. She went back in the house.

At 9 o'clock a touring car with top canopy and side curtains—the latter drawn closely—whirled into the Eaton driveway and stopped as close to the side door as the chauffeur could manage it.

State Officer John Scott of Rockland and Deputy Sheriff John T. Condon of Rockland—the two officials who have done the principal detective work for District Attorney Barker—jumped out and entered the house.

There was a half-hour interim with no sign from the house. The chauffeur waited stolidly at the wheel of the car. At 9:30 the side door of the house was opened. Someone peered out. The chauffeur looked up, then hopped out and entered the house.

Dressed in Deep Mourning.

After the chauffeur entered the door was shut quickly. But it was reopened a moment later. Mrs. Eaton stepped out quickly. She was dressed in black dress and black hat, the mourning garb she wore when she and Miss Dorothy Eaton came to Boston last week Wednesday with the Admiral's body.

Today was the first time, by the way, that Mrs. Eaton had been away from the Eaton premises since she returned there after the interment of the Admiral at Dracut on that day.

Scott and Condon jumped into the auto after her and the machine was sped out the Eaton driveway and over the road toward Hingham at a fast rate.

The car arrived in front of the Hingham courthouse on South street before 10 o'clock, so rapidly did the chauffeur drive it.

When the car drew up at the curb, right in front of the doorway opening on the courtroom stairs, Mrs. Eaton stepped out, with Scott and Condon close behind. She was calm but grave. There was no sign of the usual smile on her plump face.

As Mrs. Eaton started up the long flight of stairs Scott and Condon took either arm, as though assisting her.

Judge Edward B. Pratt of Second Plymouth District Court, who has been presiding at the Hingham inquest, arrived with the court stenographer before Mrs Eaton came. The Judge sent out for Police Chief Washington I. James of Hingham, who hurried into the Judge's private office and locked the door. A little later the Judge gave orders that none but officials and witnesses be allowed in the courtroom building. Up to the present reporters have been allowed up the stairway and in the corridor.

Witnesses began to arrive. Among them them were Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Jacobs of Assinippi, who live a mile from the Eatons, and who have been very friendly with the Eaton family.

District Attorney Barker arrived but, instead of chatting with the newspapermen on the sidewalk, he bolted up the courtroom stairs as though the most important development so far in the case was right in hand's touch.

Hurried Call for Counsel.

At 10:30 came the next big development. Francis J. Geogan, Mrs. Eaton's personal counsel, arrived in a hurry. He had received a hurry telephone summons from none the less than District Attorney Barker, calling him from a case in Abington session of Second Plymouth District Court.

Mr. Geogan naturally dropped everything and made haste to Hingham courthouse. Reporters spied him approaching the courthouse and ran toward him. On his remaining distance to the court stairway the widow's attorney said:

"I got a telephone call from Mr. Barker while I was in court at Abington, telling me to come over to Hingham courthouse right away. That's all I know. Here I am.

"I have no rights at an inquest. That's all I can say."

Detectives Still Search for Proof of Poison Sale

"Mrs. Eaton is now under arrest for the murder of her husband. Rear Admiral Joseph Giles Eaton did not die a natural death. This fact was communicated to me on March 10 by Professor Whitney of Harvard in a preliminary verbal report. This fact has been known to the officers at work on the case for some time.

"Peculiar features have prevented the communication of this fact to the public. We are unable at the present time to say where the poison was purchased."—District Attorney Barker to the AMERICAN.

West Norwell Mystery Partly Cleared by Report of Professor Whitney.

Mrs. Keyes is found at the home of her parents at No. 0 Adams street, Winter Hill, Somerville. He said:

"Let me be emphatic in saying there is no estrangement between my wife and myself. In view of the fact that Mrs. Keyes is likely for some time to come to spend a large part of her time with her mother, it seemed useless to me to keep the Medford home open. In consequence of this, we have closed the apartment there, and I am living temporarily with my parents.

This Shampoo Best For Home Use

"Every woman prizes luxuriant hair," says Mme Martyn, in the Tacoma Examiner, "and many find that much depends on shampooing. Various preparations are used for this purpose, but few are free from injurious ingredients, and the result is thin, straggly hair and itchy scalp.

"A simple and inexpensive shampoo mixture can be made at home by dissolving a teaspoonful of canthrox in a teacup of hot water. This is poured on the scalp and rubbed until lathering freely, then the hair rinsed carefully and dried.

"Nothing so quickly promotes a healthy condition of the scalp as a canthrox shampoo, and its use is certain to produce glossy, luxuriant hair. Care should be taken to get an original package of canthrox."—Advertisement.

It was reported today that Ralph Preble Keyes of Medford and his bride, Mrs. June Eaton Keyer, elder stepdaughter of Rear Admiral Eaton, have separated. The report was emphatically denied by the husband, who said his wife has taken her trunks to Assinippi in order to be near her mother. The couple formerly lived in Somerville.

Protection Against Bronchitis and Pneumonia

A Recipe.

Into a pitcher put a tablespoonful of butter, one-quarter cup light brown sugar, an ounce of fresh, whole allspice and a pint of Duffy's pure malt whiskey. Let it stand for half an hour; then add one-half pint boiling water. Let it stand again for a short while, and before serving stir well and add the juice of one orange and one lemon. This is to be served in a wine glass.

It is very wholesome, appetizing and strengthening, especially for fever and chills in stormy and blustering weather. Prompt action on such occasions will ward off many a serious and oftentimes fatal attack of bronchitis and pneumonia, as well as irritating coughs and colds.

Health Back After Lungs Were Affected

Sufferers from weak lungs or throat troubles, the result of neglecting a cold or a fever, should investigate the many reports of recoveries brought about by the use of Eckman's Alterative. If other medicines or treatments are doing you good, don't change; but if you are not gaining health and strength, at least give a trial to Eckman's Alterative. Read what was the result in this case:

33 B Street, Keyser, W. Va.

"Gentlemen: I was taken sick November, 1909, with a very bad cold and deep settle, which I fought for about three weeks, when I went to bed. The doctor then pronounced my case as malarial fever. I grew steadily worse for two weeks more, when I got up and the next day I was told that the fever had affected my lungs. My physician had tried most all kinds of treatment and could do no more, so I asked my husband if he objected to him trying a proprietary medicine, to which my husband told him to try anything he thought would do me any good. So I bought your Alterative, and was in bed from November 20, 1909, until February 23, 1910. Today (over three years later) I am healthier and stronger than I ever was before. Eckman's Alterative is healthy, and I advise all people with lung trouble to give it a good trial."

MRS. H. K. BRILEY.

Eckman's Alterative is effective in Bronchitis, Asthma, Hay Fever, Throat and Lung Troubles and in upbuilding the system. Does not contain opiates, sedative or habit-forming drugs. For sale by Riker-Jaynes' Drug Stores and Houghton & Dutton Drug Dept. and all leading druggists. Ask for booklet of testimonials, and write to Eckman Laboratory, Philadelphia, Pa., for additional evidence.

BELIEVE DOCTOR HAS EATON DEATH SECRET

FRAME'S KNOWLEDGE OF ADMIRAL'S FAMILY SAID TO HAVE CAUSE D CALL FOR AUTOPSY.

Has Dr. Joseph Frame, family physician of the Eatons, the real secret of the Admiral's death?

Interest in the investigation of the Ashmont poison mystery is now centred on the knowledge that Dr. Frame is believed to possess, a knowledge that led him to call for an autopsy just as the undertaker was about to proceed to embalm the body and thus obliterate all evidence that has since pointed to a tragedy at West Norwell.

What did Dr. Frame know of the Admiral's family or the circumstances surrounding the daily life of the retired naval officer that caused him to stop the preparation for burial even before he had viewed the body?

Had the Admiral made of his personal physician a confidant in his domestic troubles? Were these domestic troubles of such a serious nature that Dr. Frame hesitated a moment when informed of the Admiral's death in reporting it to the medical examiner as a case for investigation?

What Did Dr. Frame Know?

It was learned that one of the strongest points for believing Dr. Frame had intimate knowledge of some trouble in the Admiral's life, the existence of which a sudden death might confirm was:

Dr. Frame at the time he reported Admiral Eaton's death to Medical Examiner Osgood did not know the requirements of the law which makes such report compulsory.

Yet Dr. Frame immediately notified the medical examiner as soon as he learned of Admiral Eaton's sudden death.

Dr. Frame admitted this fact to an AMERICAN reporter. Although he refused to be quoted in any way regarding the case, it developed during his conversation he had no definite idea of just what cases call for a compulsory report to the medical examiner.

Dr. Frame of course knew that deaths by accident were cases for a medical examiner. He is too good a physician and too intelligent a man to be caught napping on such a death.

Yet he practically admitted he did not know the law governing such cases and he left but one inference, that he acted on some information important enough in his judgment to halt the undertaker.

Dr. Frame, who is some forty-six years ago, Dr. Frame graduated from Harvard Medical School in the class of 1894. He served a year and one-half as first assistant physician at the Boston City Hospital, where he had the opportunity of extensive practice in surgery and diagnoses. He specialized on the throat, nose and ear and gained a reputation as a skillful surgeon.

About seventeen years ago he went to Rockland as a young assistant to Dr. C. S. Millet, one of the older physicians of the town. He progressed rapidly in his practice and just as rapidly in the esteem of the citizens of Rockland.

Some years ago he married a Miss Turner, a Rockland girl, and they have two children. Dr. Frame has been honored by his fellow citizens not only with a lucrative practice but with many town offices. The citizens elected him chairman of the Board of Health, a position he now holds.

Praises Eaton Family Physician.

He is a member of the Old Colony Medical Society, the Boston City Hospital Society and the Massachusetts Medical Society. That is Dr. Frame as a citizen and a physician.

J. F. Garner, a Rockland merchant, said of Dr. Frame:

"If you want to get one of our staunch citizens, you want to go down and get Dr. Frame."

Dr. Frame is the type of physician Will Carleton made famous in his poem, "The Country Doctor." Dr. Frame is a Harvard man. It sticks out all over him and all over the walls of his little office.

He is a well-built man, rather above the average in height, about 5 feet 10 inches tall. He might weigh 160 and he might go as high as 170 pounds. He is of that build which would easily deceive one as to his weight and strength.

A high, broad forehead, with hair which is just beginning to turn from a sandy color to a gray about the temples. His eyes, set well apart, look over a strong aquiline nose and peer at one from behind steel-rimmed double-lens spectacles. His eyes change slightly, but they have always a power of looking one through and through.

A closely cropped mustache helps to conceal a mouth which even when the doctor smiles barely expands a little at the corners. In fact, Dr. Frame's smile is as eminently proper and formal as everything else about him.

He wore a rather shabby inside coat, evidently one from an old discarded suit, which he had pressed into service as a house or office coat. It was of a bluish mixture, slightly different in texture and color from the vest and trousers which belonged to another suit.

A large gold chain, the links showing years of service, crossed his waistcoat. Dr. Frame doesn't care much whether his thousers are creased or not. Such things do not bother the type of man he is. His simple tastes were reflected in the fittings of his office. Plain, serviceable, straight-backed chairs, two of them, a desk littered with pamphlets and papers, two diplomas hanging from the walls, and a common grocer's scales like those used in weighing out sugar completed the office equipment.

Tastes Are Simple.

His simple tastes are carried out in his method of getting around to see his patients. Dr. Frame is not an automobile lover. He has a horse and carriage, and is well content with that means of locomotion. He really dislikes automobiles, and says he has never driven one. The horse is good enough for him.

His shoes of black kid, unpolished, square toed, carry out a composite picture of Dr. Frame. There is something about the square shoe that betokens the square man.

His voice is neither low nor loud. It is a happy medium, as well modulated as his habits and deportment. In conversation with a stranger he is curt even to the point of brusqueness. He presents a cold exterior, polished, marbleike. To a friend or one who once got inside his reserve, he is genial, entirely human. Just a drumm on the table when he talks. He will talk about anything but the Eaton case. He is afraid even of getting on any case similar to which one might possibly use as a parallel to get his ideas from.

Dr. Frame is cautious. Moreover, he has certain standards of conduct, moral and social. He lives up to them. He expects one who would be his friend to do the same.

All of all, he is just the type of man who, when told of Admiral Eaton's death, would not move a finger until he was sure he was right. It might take him considerable time to reach the conclusion that he was right. But once he did reach it and did move, one might as well try to turn the rock of Gibraltar as seek to swerve him from what he considered to be right and just.

NEPHEW OF FIRST WIFE SAYS HE IS REMEMBERED IN ADMIRAL EATON'S WILL

"The Admiral remembered you in his will."

It became known today that this statement was made by Mrs. Jennie May (Harrison) Eaton to Joseph Varnum, nephew of the late Mary Anne (Varnum) Eaton, Rear Admiral Joseph Giles Eaton's first wife, just before the Admiral's body was lowered into the grave in the cemetery here last week.

"I have not heard anything since regarding the will, and with the exception of what Mrs. Eaton said to me that day I have no knowledge that a will exists," said Mr. Varnum today at Lowell. He was the only relative besides Mrs. Eaton and her daughter Dorothy at the burial of the late Rear Admiral.

In telling of Admiral Eaton's first marriage Mr. Varnum said it was "ideal." Mr. Varnum denied the report that the Admiral detested children. Mr. Varnum said that Mr. Eaton loved children."

The conversation that took place between Mrs. Eaton and Mr. Varnum at the cemetery was discussed by the latter today. He said:

Says He Loved Children.

I said to Mrs. Eaton, "Didn't he die rather suddenly?" She replied, "Well, he had been ailing since we went to Norwell a few years ago. His did eat a heavy meal of pork."

At this point in our conversation, Dorothy broke in. She said, "Dont say anything here, mother."

Mrs. Eaton said no more for a few minutes. Then she exclaimed, "The Admiral remembered you in his will." She went no further.

Statements have been made purporting to come from Admiral Eaton's eldest stepdaughter. These statements are to the effect that the Admiral detested children. This is not so.

Admiral Eaton was a loving father, and upon the death of his own daughter in 1888 he was affected as few people know outside the family circle. He loved children.

I knew him very well, and in every respect he was a gentleman. To his first wife I know he was devoted. Their married life was ideal. He and his first wife used to come here in Summer. Oftentimes they stopped with us here at this old Varnum homestead in Dracut. They used to stay with us six or seven days at a time. They were always happy.

Silent on Coming Wedding.

After the death of the first Mrs. Eaton the Admiral's grief was pitiable.

How he came to meet his second wife I do not know. One week before they were married he came to the Varnum homestead and stayed with us a week. He was alone.

During that time he said nothing about his second marriage. He didn't mention the woman who was about to become his second wife.

It was a great surprise when we learned of the ceremony that was performed a few days after he left us.

Admiral Eaton never returned to us, and we heard from him only once or twice by letters on business matters.

SAGE TEA BEAUTIFULLY DARKENS THE HAIR WHEN FADED AND GRAY

Mixed with Sulphur Makes Hair Soft, Lustrous and Cures Dandruff.

The use of Sage and Sulphur for restoring faded, gray hair to its natural color dates back to grandmother's time. She kept her hair beautifully darkened, glossy and abundant with a brew of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Whenever her hair fell out or took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect.

But brewing at home is musy and out-of-date. Nowadays skilled chemists do this better than ourselves. By asking at any drug store for the ready-to-use product—called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy"—you will get a large bottle for about 50 cents. Some druggists make their own, which is usually too sticky, so insist upon getting "Wyeth's," which can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair and is splendid for dandruff, dry, feverish, itchy scalp and falling hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says his customers insist on Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur, because, they say, it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied—it's so easy to use, too. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one strand at a time. Do this at night and by morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, it is restored to its natural color and looks glossy, soft and abundant.

MOTOR TRUCK SHOW DISPLAYS LATEST IDEAS

By J. C. KERRIBON.

The invasion of the Garden of Babylon by the modern vehicle of commerce gives one some idea of what human ingenuity and foresight has accomplished since the days when royalty were wont to sport in the garden, which is brought to mind by the present elaborate decorations of Mechanics Building. Here, mingled with palms and wistaria draped arches, one finds commercial motor vehicles that were undreamt of ten years ago.

Instead of the Garden of Babylon, it might be termed the garden of achievements. In the production of these trucks, both great and small, the manufacturers of America have achieved greatness unexcelled by those of any other country in the world.

They have brought to a complete and practical stage the means by which merchandise can be transported from the Atlantic to the Pacific without resorting to the iron ways of America. Such long hauls, however, are not and will not be of common occurrence. One has been made for the purpose of proving that such can be accomplished.

Of all the years of the motor industry, no greater advancement has been made in any branch than that which has been witnessed in the development of th commercial motor vehicle. This advancement has been gradual and efficient. The thousands who visited Mechanics Building at the opening of the show last evening had the pleasure of inspecting as fine a representation of motor trucks as will be seen for many years.

The display comprised vehicles for every known and imaginable purpose. The light delivery wagon of the small grocer or merchant, the express wagon and all along the line to the five-ton truck is here displayed with many variations in body construction.

One thing that impressed the visitor was the large number of dumping bodies and devices, which will bring about a saving of time in loading and unloading vehicles. The ambulances, such as are used today in many of the leading hospitals of the country, are not without representation, while the fire apparatus forms a most conspicuous portion of the display.

The innumerable dumping and unloading devices which are shown attract no end of attention, for the reason that their system of operation is exemplified, some by electrical power and others by power from the motor of the truck.

Some manufacturers have even provided two or three bodies for a single chassis, so that one body may be removed and loaded while the chassis is carrying an other body. Power hoists, hand hoists and roller beds for bodies are seen in endless variety.

The Motor Truck Show has brought to Boston the representative engineers and officials of the leading truck builders of the country.

Kissel Trucks Have Private Display Only

Manager Pruden of the Kissel Kar New England branch, believing that greater importance is attached to facts, and believing that the buying public is interested in seeing a real service building where service can be readily rendered, is displaying his trucks in private at his magnificent new service station, No. 1030 Commonwealth avenue only.

The Kissel is the largest line of trucks manufactured by any one concern in the United States. The line includes a 1,500-pound delivery wagon and one, one and quarter, two, three, four and five-ton trucks. Seven different models with the purchaser's option regarding length back of driver's seat and body most suitable to the individual business in which the truck is to be used is certainly a display which should prove inviting to every motor vehicle purchaser who will visit the show.

LARGEST YEAR IN TRUCK HISTORY

"It is freely agreed by those in close touch with the situation that this year will be far and away the largest ever enjoyed by motor truck manufacturers," says George H. Hudson, Alco manager for Boston. "One estimate places the production figure at approximately 50,000 trucks, and others are even more optimistic.

"One big aid in the increased motor truck demand has been the improvement of highways. The effect of better roads has been felt particularly in the rural districts, and today an amount of inter-urban motor delivery undreamed of a few years ago is being carried on. What formerly were considered points beyond the radius of the horse system are by the motor truck being brought closer."

SHOW NOTES

Perhaps the largest trucks in the show are the two six and one-half ton Alco cars, one of which is fitted with a thousand gallon tank. This truck was recently purchased by the Barrett Manufacturing Company to be used for hauling tarvia.

A power pump driven by the motor, which automatically sprays the material on the road, has been applied to the tank. The tank is painted black, in striking contrast to the chassis, which is lead gray.

The other six and one-half ton Alco is fitted with a combination panel and rack body, and has been purchased by the H. P. Hood & Sons Milk Company to deliver milk both bottled and in cans. The body of this truck is painted green, with a red running gear.

The question as to the date of the Vanderbilt and Grand Prize races has been determined by the contest board of the A. A. A. in their announcement of yesterday. These events will be held at Savannah on November 24 and 27 respectively.

Spring arrived in Boston yesterday, just two days ahead of its schedule. It came in charge of H. S. Diffey, of the Lauth-Juergens Motor Truck Company, who appeared at the show attired in a suit of light gray cloth. Dave Abrams was jealous of this appearance. The straw hat is due next week.

Designing and building every possible part that goes into a White motor truck is not only a hobby with this company, but an important manufacturing policy. It is based on the fact that the company knows its own requirements more intimately and can carry them out more intelligently than any one else.

Five thousand dollars in prizes are offered in an annual "service" competition for Ajax tires, that is bound to be of decided advantage to car owners, beginning April 1 next and terminating on March 31, 1914, according to announcement just made by the Ajax-Grieb Rubber Company, manufacturers of these tires. For the chauffeurs who in that space of time make the best mileage records out of their Ajax tires, there are altogether 208 prizes, totalling $5,000 that will be distributed by an impartial jury of three men.

One of the most business-like looking trucks is a three-ton Garford sold to the Revere Distilling Company. It is indeed a handsome job. The R. & L. Company also exhibits a full line of heavy duty trucks with a five-ton stripped chassis for minute inspection.

TRUCKS ARE USED IN GREAT VARIETY OF TRANSPORTATION

The diversity of uses to which the Autocar is put is seen by the different names on the cars observed hurrying though the streets. They are not only the names of prominent department stores, laundries, grocery stores and other merchants of most every line of business. The city of Boston uses the Autocar—four cars being in the service of the Boston City Hospital. Harvard University and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology use Autocar trucks. The Second National Bank of Boston employs one of these cars for various purposes.

"Part of the popularity of the Autocar delivery truck in this city, as elsewhere," says W. T. Savoye of the local branch, "is due to the excellent treatment which Autocar owners receive at the hands of the manufacturers following the purchase of their cars. Boston merchants owning our cars enjoy maintenance facilities which the average truck owner often lacks.

"An important feature of Autocar service is a course of instruction for drivers. Lectures by factory experts are frequently delivered and an owner is at liberty to have his driver or himself thoroughly educated in the care and operation of his truck."

WILLYS UTILITY TRUCK SHOWN AT BIG EXHIBITION

Among the new trucks displayed is the Willys Utility truck, designed for a carrying load of three-quarters of a ton.

Unlike the conventional light truck the Utility is not an adaptation of a pleasure car chassis to commercial purposes, but a high-grade truck, designed solely and especially for the carrying of merchandise.

The Utility is built with painstaking regard to the needs of business, of the best materials, and every detail has been designed with a generous margin of strength and safety.

The exceptionally low price of the Utility chassis is based on production in large quantities.

The features of the motor are simplicity and accessibility. The oiling system is absolutely reliable and requires no attention except an occasional refilling of the oil base.

General Salesmanager Whelan of the Gramm Motor Truck Company, makers of the Willys Utility, is personally in charge of the local exhibit.

BOSTON TRADE OUTLOOK GOOD, KELLY STATES

E. S. Kelly, president of the Kelly-Springfield Motor Truck Company, who is attending the Motor Show, is very favorably impressed with the outlook in Boston. He predicts that Boston will become one of the greatest motor truck centres in the country.

"Every time I come to Boston, I am more favorably impressed than before," said Mr. Kelly. "The possibilities of Boston and surrounding towns in a motor truck way are really stupendous. There are more than a million people in the immediate vicinity of Boston, but these are all far enough away to make a motor truck at least more effective. The Boston Pleasure Car Show has always stood out as a great buying show, and I think that this year's Truck Show will be the greatest that has ever been held here."

Mr. Kelly was accompanied by A. S. Holly, manager of the New York branch of the Kelly-Springfield Motor Truck Co.

F. P. Brand, general representative, Charles Balough, chief engineer, and F. B. Hutchinson, advertising manager, are here from the factory.

The local exhibit is in charge of P. S. Aultman, manager of the Boston branch, assisted by W. S. Jewell, sales manager, W. B. Wilcox, C. A. Platts, J. W. Jewell, R. B. Comins, J. C. Welsh and M. Woodbury Sawyer.

SIX MOTOR TRUCK TIRES SHOWN BY GOODYEAR FIRM

"The year 1911 was for us a fruitful one—markedly the most successful in our thirteen years' history," says C. W. Martin, manager of the motor truck tire department of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company of Akron, O., now in charge of Goodyear activities at the Commercial Car Show.

"It was 1911 that saw the Goodyear No-Rim-Cut tire become the sensation of motordom. And, no doubt, the public regards this as our greatest 1911 achievement. But is it?

"Let us point to some remarkable Goodyear inventions in motor truck tires—six in all. For it seems certain that some of these new types of Goodyear motor truck tires will rise to as high a plane of popularity among commercial car owners as No-Rim-Cut tires have among pleasure car owners."

MOTOR TRUCKS ARE NO LONGER EXPERIMENTS

By GEORGE C. GORDON,
President of the Selden Truck Sales Company.

The marvelous growth in the demand for commercial motor vehicles is significant of the fact that this type of car has demonstrated beyond question its economy and efficiency in solving the many transportation problems that confront the business world.

The motor truck is purely a business proposition. Its popularity is not founded upon a mere desire on the part of society to indulge in expensive luxuries merely for pleasure. The very term "pleasure car" as applied to the vast majority of motor vehicles in use today is significant. It describes in a nut shell the forces which up to a short time ago created and controlled the great demand for motor cars. These conditions have gradually changed, and today the practical value of the automobile as a business proposition is well established. To those who have once experienced its many advantages it is considered an absolute necessity.

The only obstacle in the way of thousands of sales of motor trucks is the fact that many merchants and manufacturers find it a hardship to meet the first cost when required to pay the purchase price all at once in cash, as is generally required in the automobile business.

To meet this condition we have organized a Sales Company separate from the Manufacturing Company, which is backed by resources of several million dollars, in order to sell trucks on a deferred payment plan, and to reach the many prospective purchasers who don't find it convenient to purchase on a cash basis.

This plan of selling as applied to motor trucks is just as simple and reasonable as in any other line of business, and we believe it is going to be the means of enormously increasing the already large demand for the commercial car.

Electric Starter and Lighter Is Successful

The U-S-L electric starter and lighter is a distinct departure from starting and lighting equipments that have heretofore been offered to gasoline automobile owners inasmuch as it is designed to utilize the integral parts of the car as originally built, instead of installing devices that are really foreign to the automobile mechanism itself.

The principle upon which its designers worked was that of converting the usual fly-wheel into a motor-generator so that it should become at once a motor for starting the engine and a generator for making electrical current when once the engine is under way.

The success with which this fundamentally different idea has been worked out is such that the U-S-L electric starter and lighter has proved to be one of the most important and most useful devices introduced during the entire course of automobile development.

It not only overcomes the disadvantages of starters that have heretofore been brought out, but in many particulars gives added convenience and efficiency of operation. It puts an end to the uncertainty that has usually been associated with automatic cranking devices and proves that an equipment may be installed that shall be absolutely and completely dependable under all conditions and circumstances.

FUEL STOPPAGE.

Cause Is Trouble in the Gasoline Feed Line.

When a motor car, after being cranked, runs for a minute or two and then stops the first place to look for the cause of the trouble is in the gasoline feed line. A partial stoppage in the pipe will lessen the flow of fuel so that the float chamber fills slowly.

On being started the motor at once consumes this gasoline and then has to wait for more. There is another possible cause for this trouble and that is the float of the carburetor sticking.

Good Way to Clean Radiators.

While many find that a jet of steam blown through the honeycomb type of radiator is a very good way to clean it, there is another method. Prepare a solution of 10 per cent. potash and 90 per cent. water and heat it. When the boiling point is just reached pour the solution into the radiator after closing the pipes which in service lead to and from the motor. Let the mixture remain in the radiator for twelve hours, stirring every hour by turning the radiator upside down; then pour out the solution by the same opening as it was poured in. Then, to wash thoroughly, screw a water hose with pressure into to opening at the opposite end and run a stream through for a few minutes.

Goodyear Truck Tires Also Lead

At the Mechanics Building more commercial vehicles are equipped with Goodyear tires than with any other make.

So it is at every leading show. At the New York and Chicago shows, Goodyear led by an overwhelming majority.

It is estimated that over sixty per cent. of the trucks made during 1913 will go out from truck factories with Goodyear equipment.

All this is the result of making a special tire for every service. Thus have users been enabled to select the tire best adapted to their particular needs.

A Tire For Every Service

Goodyear Solid Demountable 10,000 Mile Tire

A tire that abolishes the need of a tire applying station—a tire that is good enough to deserve a specific guaranty. This is the most serviceable tire for heavy duty trucks and meets the requirements of those who want a tire that can be easily put on and taken off.

Goodyear Demountable Cushion Truck Tire

Combines resiliency and durability. With its double notched treads, attains the utmost non-skid properties. This tire is demountable and fits S. A. E. Standard Wheel.

Goodyear Solid Metal-Base Truck Tire

Designed for heavy service, where truck owners are in close touch with tire applying stations and do not wish the Demountable feature.

Goodyear Solid Side Flange Truck Tire

This tire was designed as a "fixed on" type whose application is practicable to the S. A. E. wheel, and also for use wherever the "fixed on" type is preferred to demountable.

GOODYEAR AKRON, OHIO

Goodyear Individual Block Truck Tire

Specially adapted to heavy duty trucks that require exceptional traction and non-skid feature on rear wheels. The advantage of this tire is that, if a block is damaged, it can readily be replaced.

Goodyear Solid No-Rim-Cut Truck Tire

Possesses unusual resiliency for a solid tire. Thus it protects the car from violent strains and shocks of rough roads.

Goodyear Clincher Truck Tire

For light package delivery wagons or high speed trucks equipped with standard pneumatic clincher rims. Guaranty 8,000 miles—9 months.

A great advantage enjoyed by owners of Autocar Motor Trucks is the unusual facilities for garaging and maintenance provided by the manufacturers.

The Boston branch of the Autocar Company is one of the most ideally located and best equipped garages in New England. A notable feature is a hydraulic storage system for gasoline, which insures gasoline that is entirely free from water.

It means a great deal to an owner or driver of a motor truck to know that he has the aid of factory-taught experts at hand in time of need. Boston merchants owning Autocars, have the constant co-operation of our Beacon street service building in keeping their cars in perfect condition.

MOTOR DELIVERY CAR SPECIALISTS

MOTOR TRUCKS CUT EXPENSES ON DELIVERIES

By H. S. DILLER.

Sales Manager Lauth-Juergens Motor Truck Company.

A few years ago the truck manufacturer's problem was much more difficult than it is today. The merchant or manufacturer who intended to purchase a motor truck looked at the question of motorizing his delivery system as a purely experimental subject. Today the problem is entirely different. Most business men are educated to the fact that the motor truck, in many instances, cuts the delivery expense exactly one-half in comparison to the cost of the horse delivery service. The buyer, therefore, looks at the purchase of the motor truck in an entirely different light.

Purchase is not now made, because a glib salesman of motor trucks makes a lot of persuasive statements. The question of the reliability of the manufacturer, the construction of the truck predominates and usually the company's engineer decides the question as to the mechanical efficiency of the truck.

Merchants Recognize Worth.

The merchant now does not believe that the motor truck is an expensive proposition, and that he ought to use trucks to be up to date, as he previously did. Two years ago I knew of cases where the operation of the truck was charged up to the advertising expense account, which plainly shows the manner in which the purchase was considered.

Merchants who did buy trucks a few years ago were usually surprised if the truck stood up and gave economical service.

Today, however, when a concern decides to install motor trucks, they go after it systematically, and the persuasive salesman doesn't cut so much figure. The concern's engineers and mechanical men thoroughly examine the construction of the various trucks offered for sale and weigh the points of superiority very carefully, looking for strength, durability and simplicity of construction and economy of operation and maintenance. The heads of the firm pay close attention to the stability of the company which is manufacturing the truck, and the company which is solid financially, free from stock juggling, and which has a long record of high-grade manufacturing behind it, gets first consideration.

Truck Field Large.

Also the company that has a large investment in plants and machinery, that manufactures the truck entirely in its own factory from the raw material to the finished product, meets with much more consideration than a company that has but a small outlay in the manufacturing end, buying motors, transmissions, axles, etc., and merely putting them together and marketing them.

The motor truck field is getting to be enormous, as one after another of the many different and widely varied lines of business and trades discover that a properly built motor truck will do their work more efficiently, more quickly and more economically than they could ever do it with the old horse-drawn method.

The present method of building trucks enables the purchaser to use them the year round in almost all kinds of weather and without danger to the truck. In the majority of large cities the truck is used every working day in the year. This is better explained by calling attention to the maintenance station of the Lauth-Juergens Company in Chicago. It serves to garage and maintain any truck of its make for a fixed sum per month, which covers all expense of operating the truck except tires and driver.

Give Expert Service.

This system permits this factory to give the purchaser of a truck expert service in a mechanical way, as the truck is housed daily at the maintenance station, who sees to it that the investment of the owner of the truck is protected at all times by detecting any abuse of the truck in the hands of a careless driver. This guarantees and insures a truck daily for every working day in the year.

E. J. MITTON LEFT $3,070,000 ESTATE

The will of Edward J. Mitton of Brookline, vice-president of the Jordan Marsh Company, which has been allowed by Judge Flint in the Norfolk Probate Court, left an estate of $3,000,000 in personal property and $70,000 in real estate.

Peerless Trucks Displayed in Two Chassis Lengths

Peerless trucks are displayed at Mechanics Building in three sizes, three-ton, four-ton and five-ton. Each size is made in two lengths of chassis.

The Peerless truck motor is of the four-cylinder, four-cycle water-cooled type with "T" head cylinders cast in pairs. Bore is four and one-half inch and stroke six and one-half inch. The motor rates at 32.4 horse-power, according to the A. L. A. M. formula, which does not take into consideration the stroke. It actually delivers forty-horse-power to the brake.

The Peerless truck motor is a marked example of the long stroke type. This type attains increased efficiency through the fact that it develops power at low fly wheel speed equal to that of shorter stroke motors at greatly increased fly wheel speed. This greatly reduces vibration and results in smooth, even running. It tends toward long life in the mechanism. Operation of the truck on high gear at low speeds is possible, so that much gear shifting is avoided.

Inlet valves are on the right side and exhaust valves on the left side of the cylinders. The crank case is in two parts. All bearings are carried in the upper half and the lower half serves as an oil receptacle.

This arrangement makes for accessibility. The lower half can be dropped quickly and the bearings carried in the upper half are then exposed.

The Peerless truck motor is carried under a hood in front, where it is accessible for adjustment by simply opening the bonnet.

A lower driver's seat is possible than in the truck where the motor is placed under the seat. This reduces the labor of mounting to the driver's seat and dismounting when many stops must be made and makes it possible to operate the truck under low, overhanging structures.

Why Electric Lights Tire Us

The fact that the powerful rays of arc and incandescent lamps cause a peculiar kind of fatigue is only one of many astonishing scientific discoveries which fill this entertaining and instructive page.

CLAIM PLACING OF MOTOR GIVES BIG TRACTION

The characteristic by which the many trucks on display at the show can be most easily divided into classes by the non-technical observer is the method of placing the motor. Some carry it under the hood and others under the seat.

The Peerless trucks—three ton, four ton and five ton—are examples of the motor-under-the-hood practice. Large advantages in the matter of weight distribution are claimed for this design.

The power of a truck depends largely on the efficiency of the traction. And to prevent the slipping of the driving wheels under all circumstances it is necessary that a large proportion of the load be carried upon them.

The Peerless practice places eighty per cent. of the paying load on the rear axle. This insures powerful traction and by reducing the burden on the front axle makes it possible to employ light and flexible front springs. These protect the motor and the important parts of the truck mechanism from destructive road shocks.

The front axle with the steering knuckles and other moving parts present a most difficult engineering problem when it must be built to carry a great weight constantly, but it is easy to build a straight, simple rear axle to carry almost any load.

Mais Truck Is Displayed by A. W. Cox

The Mais truck, the first of the internal gear driven commercial motor vehicles to be manufactured in this country, is being exhibited at the show in Mechanics Building by A. W. Cox & Co. of Cambridge, who recently took over the agency from R. L. & H. H. Smith, who have handled this line in Boston for several years.

A. W. Cox & Co. are not newcomers in the auto trade. They have a large service station at Amherst and Hayward street, Cambridge. The Mais exhibit is just inside the Exhibition Hall at the main entrance.

The "youngest manager" is John F. Royal of Boston, known up and down the town as "Johnnie" Royal. He goes to Cincinnati, Ohio, to take charge of the B. F. Keith Columbia Theatre there.

"Johnnie" Royal went into the theatrical field, like many another successful one, through the newspaper entrance. He was a Boston reporter. Two years ago he became publicity agent at the National Theatre on Tremont street. He was then twenty-four.

Natural ability and a winning way combined to turn the trick quickly for "Johnnie," who gets a theatre on the Keith string to manage for himself after two years' laboring in the Boston vineyard.

WALTHAM WIVES FOR $50 LIMIT ON MAN'S DRESS

Out in Ohio men are trying to regulate the dress which milady shall wear, but Waltham women, suffragists by the way, are having revenge by endeavoring to show their husbands how to save. They place $50 a year as a limit for man's garb. They have compiled a table to show how much man shall pay for his new suit, hosiery, gloves, etc. They are going to teach him how to become a regular bargain hunter. They figure it out to the half cent. Here is the table:

Winter suit	$12.00
Summer suit	10.00

Cap for Summer	.37½
Shoes	3.00

Underclothing	7.62
Neckties	.12½
Shoestrings	.07½

MAN first carried a load on his back; then he dragged it over the ground. Then he invented the wheel; and drew the load in a cart. Next, man tamed a wild beast, and made the beast haul the cart.

Then followed the ox; but the ox was too slow. Next came the horse; but the horse could not keep up with the pace of modern business. Now comes the motor truck—a creature of steel.

A Creature of Steel

The Alco truck is a mechanical creature that hauls heavy loads faster than the horse. It is the outgrowth of a 250 years' search to find a substitute for the beast of burden.

Ever since man invented the wheel its coming has been expected. It is a device of Destiny.

Its only reason for existing to-day is to save. It saves time, saves labor, saves money—it has been known even to save a man's business. If it did not save, it would not exist long. Modern business would quickly dispense with it.

It has saved because there are close on to 1000 of its kind in use—and the number is constantly increasing.

It is proving its economy in over 103 lines of business. It is meeting this supreme test daily—in almost every State in America.

It is hauling cane in Cuba, fresh fruit in Porto Rico, rice in the Philippines, pineapples in Hawaii, oranges in California, ore in Alaska, produce in Long Island, textiles in Massachusetts, cotton in Alabama, groceries in Ohio, milk in Boston, meat in Chicago and trunks in New York City.

It has performed its tasks well, for its sales record in re-orders is 62 per cent.

Sixty-five per cent of its kind are being operated by large concerns listed by Bradstreet's or Dun at $1,000,000 or over—concerns that rarely purchase "unknowns."

Its early life is spent in large foundries, among huge hammers and extensive heat treating plants, among automatic machines and as it grows up it receives the severest of tests of chemical and physical laboratories. It is well built and strong. It has power. Its "rolling rubber feet" never tire. It is well fitted for the bumps of the world.

It goes out upon its career backed by a company, capitalized at $50,000,000, which has a transportation experience as movers of the world's goods that dates back to 1835.

DR. FRIEDMANN SAYS HE WILL CURE THEM ALL

NEW YORK, March 20.—Frederick F. Friedmann, the German doctor who claims to have discovered a cure for tuberculosis, today issued a warning to sufferers from pulmonary consumption and other tubercular ailments in all parts of the United States not to come to New York for treatment. The statement follows.

Do not come to New York at this time. Stay at home and keep your patience. It won't be long until you will all have the opportunity of receiving my treatment.

The trip to this city consumes your strength and vitality. You cannot afford this expenditure.

A railroad trip to this city may cost you your life; so do not encumber me by making such a trip, because I cannot now treat any but such sufferers as are countenanced by the government physicians.

Suffragettes in England Destroy White Mansion

LONDON, March 20.—Suffragettes carried the torch into Surrey today, burning Trevethen Mansion, the home of the widow of Sir George White, at Engle Field Green. The building was destroyed, the loss being over $25,000.

The building was unoccupied and the women gained entrance with skeleton keys. They had poured kerosene over the house.

A clew to the crime was contained in chalk scrawls of "Votes for Women" and "We Will Burn Till We Get the Vote."

Scattered among the ruins were a number of pamphlets on suffrage. One big placard bore this inscription: "Stop Torturing Our Comrades in Prison."

The clubhouse and other buildings on the Worlesbury golf links were also destroyed by fire during the night.

ZEPPELIN AIRSHIP WRECKED BY WIND

KARLSRUHE, Germany, March 20.—The German military dirigible of the Zeppelin type known as "Substitute ZL." was wrecked while attempting to effect a landing here, two months after her trial flight.

DEMAND QUICK EXECUTION OF KING'S SLAYER

ATHENS, March 20. Demands for the summary execution of Aleko Schinas, the assassin of King George are pouring in upon the Greek government from various subjects of the national martyr. The demand for vengeance is deep and nation wide.

Premier Venezelos declared today, however, that the law would take its course, that that justice would be meted out in the quickest manner possible.

The outcast regicide in Salonika will make no attempt to defend himself. If tried by the civil court, Schinas will be hanged. If tried by the military court at Salonika he will be shot.

A woman may be involved in the assassination to the extent of being necessary before the fact, according to the military authorities. Schinas is said to have been accompanied to Salonika by a woman companion, who cannot now be found.

King Constantine arrived here today to take the oath. He expressed hope that the present Cabinet would remain in office, in pursuance with his desires to retain the services of Premier Venezelos and Foreign Minister Gounaris.

A telegram from Salonika stated that the wireless station there was in communication with the ship bearing Queen Mother Olga and the Princes and Princesses. Olga is still suffering keenly from the shock of her royal husband's death, and is under the constant watch of a nurse.

The late King will be buried in a mausoleum on a small promontory hill, at his country residence at Tatoi.

LEPINE RESIGNS AS PARIS POLICE CHIEF

PARIS, March 20.—Louis Lepine, prefect of Paris police, has resigned after twenty years' service, interrupted by an absence of two years, when he served as Governor-General of Algeria from 1902 to 1909. M. Lepine is sixty-seven years of age.

Sir Thomas Makes Another Plea by Cable for a Race

LONDON, March 20.—Sir Thomas Lipton is making a final effort to have his recent challenge for the America's cup accepted.

It was said today at the headquarters of the Royal Ulster Yacht Club, the organization through which Sir Thomas sent his challenge, that a cablegram had been sent to the New York Yacht Club requesting reconsideration of the recent decision not to accept Sir Thomas' offer.

The letter of the New York club, containing the rejection of the Lipton challenge because of the stipulation that the racing yacht should not exceed seventy-five feet on the waterline, has been received by the Ulster club and turned over to Sir Thomas.

You see the AMERICAN everywhere—in the homes, clubs, restaurants, hotels, cars and boats.

POPE'S DOCTOR MUCH WORRIED; PONTIFF WEAK

ROME, March 20.—Although Pope Pius X has left his bed and all medals upon administering papal affairs of the church, it was learned that his condition is still causing considerable anxiety to the Vatican court physicians. Dr. Amici.

The newspaper Corriere Della Sera stated today that the Pope had conducted a mass against the orders of his medical aids and that this together with other duties he insisted upon performing, greatly weakened him.

The pontiff has been advised to go to Castelgandolfo for a change of air, but has refused to take such a precaution.

Roxbury Man Kills Himself in 3-Story Plunge

Anthony Doherty, twenty-six, single, of No. 19 Burney street, Roxbury, committed suicide early today by leaping from a third-story window. It was said he had been melancholy of late.

The body was found by Thomas Crowley of No. 67 Bow avenue, who was going to work. It was found in a pool of blood. Dr. T. H. Gilchrist of Tremont street, was called but life was extinct. It is believed he was keyed to high pitch. Examiner Timothy Leary was notified and he ordered the body sent into the house. He will view it later. The police called it a case of suicide.

Doherty lived with his uncle, Constantine Doherty.

WOOD'S SPEEDY 'BEAN BALL' MAY CRIPPLE BYRNE

By L. R. MURDOCH.

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., March 20—"Smoky Joe" Wood, the Boston speed king, was unnerved today over the accident in the third inning of yesterday's game between the Red Sox and Pirates, when one of his fast balls hit Bobby Byrne, the Pittsburgh star third baseman, over and behind the left temple, laying Byrne out. The injured man is in a serious condition at the Hotel Eastman today. The surgeons attending him said that it could not be determined whether his skull was fractured until a huge swelling over the wound subsides.

The ball that bit Byrne was one of Wood's fast ones. The Boston pitcher was hurling them almost with mid-season speed when the accident occurred. The day was dark and the heavy hitting Pirates were swinging wild as the fast ones that stood the Giants on their heads last Fall and won Wood the championship of the American League, whizzed by them.

"Honus" Wagner, who has one of the best batting eyes of any ball player in the world, declared after he had poked one to Yerkes and was thrown out in the second inning:

"Gee, you can't see those balls at all! All you can do is shut your eyes, guess and take a chance."

It was in the following inning that Byrne was hit. He stood as if dazed as Wood shot two fast ones over the plate. The next came inside. Byrne evidently didn't see it at all until it was close to him, because he made only a slight instinctive effort to dodge. The ball hit him squarely with a crack that was heard all over the park, and shot thirty feet into the air.

Byrne reeled over, limp and almost lifeless, and without even a groan. With an exclamation of horror Wood rushed up to him, and in a jiffy a crowd of players surrounded the prostrate man. They carried Byrne to an infirmary, and from there to his hotel room.

Wood was unnerved by the accident and let down on speed thereafter, passing the next man. He withdrew from the game after the fourth inning. It is such accidents that the speed pitchers such as Wood and Johnson fear at all times. Unless the batsmen can instinctively pull away from the inside ball, or keep from walking into the fastest curves they are always in danger of being hit squarely and receiving a fractured skull, which is very likely to be fatal because of the immense speed of the pitched ball.

Accident May Affect Wood.

If Byrne's accident should terminate seriously, it is feared that it would have a serious effect on Wood, because, as well as Walter Johnson, has always been fearful of such an accident.

With Wood in the box, followed by Charley Hall, the Pirates were easy for the Red Sox. They made but two safe hits off Wood, one of them a scratch, in a field effort which Wood fell over in an attempt to field.

It was Wood's first game on a raised hill in five years, and that, with the fact that he did not seem to be able to get a good grip on his curve ball, bothered the champion.

The Pirates made three hits off Hall in five innings. In the seventh, with one on, Hall curved six balls to Gibson without result. He became tired of twisting them and put over a straight ball. Gibson rapped it over the right-field fence, saving his team from a shutout.

Hall himself put the ball in the same place in the sixth inning with Gardner and Carlstrom on bases. Just before Hall went to bat, Nunamaker took two balls and then let an easy strike pass over the plate, as Hall strode up he remarked:

"If there's two and nothing on me and they try to slip one over it won't get by you but"

"Mad Mexican" Makes Homer.

Sure enough Cooper fed him two balls and then put one on the groove. That was the ball Charley Hall hoisted over the fence for the first home run of the season in a regular game. It won the "Mad Mexican" a $5 hat.

In that inning the Sox fell on Cooper for four hits and two errors netted five runs. Successive clouts by Yerkes, Speaker and Lewis gave them the other two in the third inning.

It was a bad day for accidents. In the second inning, Gardner was struck an inch above the elbow of his throwing arm and had to retire. Henriksen ran for him, but Gardner was permitted to return to the game in the next inning.

He suffered considerable pain today. If the blow had been an inch lower it might have put Gardner out of the game for part or all of the season with the possibility of crippling his fielding.

In the seventh inning, while trying to scramble back to third on Janvrin's jolt-bit to Mclarty's second, rapped by Speaker spiked McCarty's left foot. Arthur Butler the ex-Red Raider, left the game sick with a sore foot.

McCarty did a bit of fine passing in the sixth when, with Speaker running, a hit from Spring forced Wood had to drove one squarely at the Pirate third sacker. He could have touched Speaker but let the opportunity pass in order to throw low to first and nipped Lewis also.

Speed King in Rare Form.

Janvrin made the only Sox error when he dropped Yerkes' easy throw of Mclarty's ground bit in the ninth. The youngster is wearing a new glove, which makes it difficult for him to operate the ball. Speaker made three of the nine Sox hits, and Gibson and three of Pittsburg's five. Wood's first appearance this season was a tremendous success. Although suffering a bit from Spring fever, Wood had remarkable speed and control for this season of the year. Only fifteen batters faced him in four innings, one reaching base on hits after Byrne's injury. Another scratching a bit and Wilson succeeding in running a close single through Janvrin. Wilson and Hoffner were the only two who drove beyond the infield. Wood had two strikes on nearly all of the batters, and struck out four.

The players of both teams are receiving today from a ball given in their honor last night at the Eastman Hotel, when the ballroom was exquisitely decorated and many unique costumes worn in honor of the players. All of them appeared on the floor, regardless of whether it was their first effort at dancing or not. Byrne's condition, however, subdued the affair.

BROWNS IN FRONT.

ALBANY, Ga., March 20.—The St. Louis Nationals again defeated the Albany Bosh Atlantic League team here in a closely contested game by 3 to 1. Perritt and Johnson pitched for the Majors and yielded six hits.

WORLD CHAMPIONS' "BIG 4" GOING AT TOP SPEED

Here are four of the star pitchers of the Red Sox who are depended upon to bring the American League pennant and world's title to Boston again this year. Reading from left to right, they are "Smoky Joe" Wood, who got his first tryout yesterday, Hugh Bedient, Charley Hall, Ray Collins.

McCarty Should Do More Work in Ring; Is Losing Prestige

By JACK CONWAY.

Luther McCarty, the big Westerner, who is recognized as the white heavyweight champion of the world, should decide to do a little real fighting without any needless delay. If he refuses to do this, he will lose a great deal of his popularity.

McCarty has not taken part in a ring conflict since he knocked out Al Palzer. The ex-cowboy made a fine showing against Palzer, but he did not gain sufficient prestige in that contest to last him forever.

Billy McCarney's battler has been carefully side-stepping all challengers during the past two and a half months. He first refused to meet Jess Willard. This young giant vanquished McCarty in a ten-round, no-decision "go" in New York previous to the McCarty-Palzer encounter, and after Luther had beaten Palzer and was hailed as the king of the white heavyweights, Willard thought that it was no more than right that he should be given the first opportunity to meet the champion.

McCarty, however, told Willard to "go get a reputation." Perhaps he has not forgotten what Willard did to him in New York.

Bombardier Wells, the English heavyweight champion, then visited these shores. The Briton had been knocked out by Palzer last June but the victory of the lowa farmer was considered a fluke. McCarty was offered $10,000 to meet Wells but he refused this vast sum, claiming that he could make more money on the stage.

Fight "fans," however, believe that McCarty was afraid to take any chances with the Englishman. He made a great blunder, however, as Wells proved easy for "Gunboat" Smith in New York last week.

Smith has now joined Willard and is demanding a match with McCarty. The champion is still on the stage and will not say when he will enter the squared circle again.

McCarty has a wonderful physique and showed remarkable promise in his few important ring battles. His lacks experience, however, and would be acting wisely if he started boxing without any unnecessary delay.

SULLIVAN PLANS FOR 1915 GAMES ON THE COAST

By THOMAS J. HALPIN.

(Quarter-Mile Champion of United States and Canada.)

James E. Sullivan, secretary-treasurer of the Amateur Athletic Union, will leave New York Saturday for San Francisco to make preliminary preparations for the great athletic meet that will be held in connection with the Panama Exposition. From the early reports received from the coast, the coming meet that will be held there in 1915 will be one of the greatest athletic contests held in America. It is planned to make this meet a worthy rival of the Olympic contests that have been held in London and Stockholm. Every American athlete of note will be invited to take part in these great contests that will include the national track and field championships of the United States.

Competition will not be limited to residents of this country, as it is planned to invite all of the great European athletes to take part. This is particularly true of the German representatives who will attend the games in large numbers as the Berlin Olympic meet. Sullivan intends to have the coast games an official tryout for the Berlin Olympic meet.

Mr. Sullivan will sail on the steamship Nomus for New Orleans from which point he will go by rail, via sunset route, to the Golden Gate City.

At the last meeting of the A. A. U. committee held in New York, it was decided to grant the championships to the fair management as thousands of visitors to this country will take in the fair, and it will also give the western part of the country a great boost in athletics.

MORAN'S WIFE TAKES PART IN EXERCISE AT PARIS CHURCH

Mrs. Lillian D. Moran, Chelsea, wife of Jimmy Moran, the famous bicycle rider, took part in the twenty-fifth anniversary exercises of Fr. Doyle, rector of St. Joseph's Church, Paris, which is the English speaking Catholic Church in the French capital. Mrs. Moran read the address of congratulation to Fr. Doyle. Mr. and Mrs. Moran are enjoying their first visit to the continent and were very much pleased. They will leave Paris soon for Berlin and later go to Italy.

PILGRIMS MEET COLLEGIANS IN CONTEST TODAY

By A. H. C. MITCHELL.

ATHENS, Ga., March 20.—Cold and disagreeable weather is spoiling the usual kindly dispositions of the Boston baseball crew. Even the suave and courteous Stallings is losing his sunny smile. If the cold disagreeable days continue the squad is going to be in worse temper than a congress of boxing poker players.

Lack of ground for the past and hope for the future, however, the players have taken out to the ball orchard for morning practice. I just wanted to get a look-see in order to be in shape to meet the University of Georgia team this afternoon. The game was scheduled for 2:30 but a chilly rain put it off until today.

Other Clubs Also Handicapped.

From such items of baseball as appear in the local newspapers, it is believed that the other National League clubs which are training in the south also have excuses for complaint against the weather. The Reds have left Mobile in disgust and are to spend a week in Birmingham in daily contests with the Southern Leaguers.

Dahlen's Brooklyn team, which took over Augusta from the Bostons as a training ground, are far from satisfied with the way things have gone. The Weather has been cold there, too. The Cubs, it is thought, have fared better at Tampa, Fla. They are considerably further South than any other team in the big leagues and they have had a long season of training. However they met the first mouthful of the season against the other Western clubs which will give the Easterners time to catch up in the matter of condition.

Men in Good Condition.

I do not mean to convey the idea that the squad here is in poor physical condition, for the reverse is the case. Nevertheless, the cold days and the rainy days have cut the practice short, and the team work that Stallings was so anxious for his men to acquire has had to be taken in small doses.

It is foolish to clog up the telegraph wires with further gossip concerning the Boston players, as the foregoing tells all there is to tell in this dispatch.

BUSH THE BEST BASE MOOCHER

Owen Bush, shortstop of the Detroit Tigers, must have two regrets as he scans the records showing the number of bases on balls received by the American League players last season.

The indirect drew more passes than any one of the 110 all told, three of which were of the casualty kind—but all he gets for his activity in working the pitchers for transportation is honorable mention.

One of Bush's regrets is that an automobile was not offered to the player obtaining the largest number of passes instead of to the player who was the most valuable to his team.

Regret No. 2 is that the scoring rules of 1912 as regards bases on balls are not the same as they were in 1887.

Bush established an American League record last season in obtaining 130 passes. Ty Cobb, Eddie Collins, of the Chicago White Sox, procured 102 complimentary tickets to free base from the pitchers, a record which held until last season when Eddi Collins equalled it an Bush surpassed it.

The subjoined figures show the five best men on each team and the number of passes received:

Athletics—Bush, 130; Lord, 64; Zeider, 56; Barry, 50; Collins, 32.

Red Sox—Speaker, 91; Gainey, 55; Griggs, 43; Lewis, 41; Ryan, 32.

Detroit—Bush, 130; Jones, 64; Cobb, 56; Dubuc, 49; Jones, 45.

New York—Daniels, 71; Hartzell, 61; Martin, 46; Zinn, 47; Stone, 47.

Philadelphia—Collins, 102; Baker, 57; Barry, 57; Melanis, 40; Strunk, 40.

St. Louis—Shotten, 94; Austin, 42; Wallace, 42; Pratt, 39; Hogan, 34.

Washington—Milan, 67; Foster, 58; Moeller, 57; McBride, 46; Shanks, 43.

Taft Sees Cobb Play Ball Against Boston Nationals

AUGUSTA, Ga., March 20.—Ex-President Taft yesterday saw the ball game between the Georgia picked team and the Boston Nationals. "I would rather see a good ball game any time than eat," said Mr. Taft, "and I am fond of eating, too," said Mr. Taft. Mr. Taft, Mrs. Taft, Miss Helen Taft, Miss Charnock, Archie Butt, Mrs. Laughlin and other members of the Taft party attended the game. The ex-President was greatly interested in the work of Cobb.

John Hays Hammond has announced that he and Mr. Taft have made arrangements to pass every March together in Augusta.

ATHLETICS WINNERS.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., March 20.—The Philadelphia American ruggers won from the Memphis boys in League rugby here, nine to four. Harrell, Bush and Brown pitching for Philadelphia, allowed eight hits.

MELROSE LOSES 2-0 AT HOCKEY

ARLINGTON SEVEN WINS TITLE

There were few brilliant exhibitions of skill of the Inter-Scholastic Hockey League as well as the State, and the Arlington team clearly proved its superiority over the Melrose seven. Both schools were represented by cheering sections, who cheered themselves hoarse throughout the contest.

The first point of the game came after the teams played 32 minutes and 45 seconds and Wendell Heycroft of Arlington brought the spectators to their feet by his clever work. The second goal was scored seven minutes and eleven seconds later.

Throughout the match the players forgot all they were taught about team work. Individual play was the rule and players on both sevens frequently carted up or down the rink with the rubber only to find the defence the stumbling block.

SPRING BUNK.

In gentle Spring
His throwing wing
Is good for half a column
The scribes enthuse
And write their views
With faces wise and solemn.
If he complains
Of aches or pains
They always throw a spasm.
They write a lot
Of tommyrot
And rave like one who has 'em,
But later on
When Spring has gone
And scribes have lost the fever
They turn his way
And coldly say:
"Who is you buh league heaver?"

Weighty Question Worries Commission: Is Pay Due Quitter?

NEW YORK, March 20.—Our old pal Solomon, when he had nine hundred and ninety-nine skirts trailing at his heels, each trying to put the bee on him for new scenery, thought he was dead up against it.

He had the softest thing that ever sied the toboggan compared with the question that now corrugates the brows of the members of our boxing triumvirate.

Is a boxer to get any dough when he takes a sudden Brodie?

The whole trouble started when Young Gradwell of Jersey flopped in the first round of his bout with Jimmy Flynn. Gradwell claimed he was hit foul and wouldn't continue.

The club substituted another bout. Incidentally they handed Gradwell a fat check when he asked for his coin. It's now up to the commission.

ATTELL K. O.'S KIRKE IN 3RD ROUND

NEW YORK, March 20.—Abe Attell, the featherweight champion, made an auspicious comeback last night. He stopped Ollie Kirke, the St. Louis lad, who recently forced him to announce his retirement from the ring, in the third round of a scheduled ten-round bout before a large crowd that gathered at the Forty-fourth street S. C.

It was a great battle while it lasted. Attell easily carried the honors in the opening round. With a volley of lefts and rights to the body, Attell doubled Kirke up. Attell carried the fight to Kirke so fast in this round that it could be plainly seen that the St. Louisan was being fast.

Kirke started the second chapter by landing two lefts to the face, bringing the claret from Attell's nose. Attell got home two left hooks to the head in this round. Kirke seemed to like delight to rabbling the ex-champion's face with stiff lefts. A left swing and hard left to the jaw and uppercut for the chin with a good right. Kirke rallied quickly and scored with three sharp lefts to the face. The bell found them even.

In the third round, after an exchange of blows to the face, Attell sent over a short right swing to the jaw, followed by a terrific left hook to the same spot, sending Kirke staggering against the ropes, where he fell to the floor.

He arose groggy and Attell tore into him, sending him reeling across the ring. Attell worked him close to the ropes and hooked a left to the chin and Kirke fell to the canvas. He arose again, but was helpless and the referee stopped the bout. Attell weighed 122¾ pounds at ringside and Kirke 125½ pounds at ringside.

M'INNIS SIGNS UP BOXERS FOR BOUTS

Hector McInnis, the South Boston boxing manager, has matched two of his glove wielders for contests in Malden. Hector has signed "Young" McDonough to clash with Eugene Algeo in two six-round encounters at Arcadia on March 27, while he has billed Jimmy Moriarty to box Kid Fleming at Oldtown on March 28.

STRUNK'S ARM USELESS.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., March 20.—Amos Strunk, the brilliant young outfielder of the Philadelphia Athletics, may have to retire from the game. His left arm, which he uses in throwing, is now practically useless, owing to an old strain, and physicians declared they cannot do anything for him.

Chicago Plans to Hold Big Track Games in June

CHICAGO, March 20.—Plans for a mammoth athletic carnival for both amateur and professional athletes, to be held here from June 28 to July 6 inclusive, have been announced by Harold F. McCormick, president of the American Olympic games committee. Athletes from every part of the world will be invited to participate. The lines of the Olympic games will be followed closely in the amateur events, but in addition to these attractions, provided the bonfire bill now pending in the Legislature passes, there will be several professional boxing bouts.

BASEBALL PRACTICE ON AT EVERETT

The first outdoor practice of the season for the Everett High baseball team was held yesterday at Glendale Park. Nearly sixty candidates reported for the team, composing the largest baseball squad that has ever turned out at this school. Coach Cleo O'Donnell and Captain "Bucky" Sweetland have a wealth of likely material to select the team from, and many of the "E" men of former seasons are candidates.

MANY WOMEN SEE LEWIS WIN BOUT

PARIS, March 20.—Willie Lewis, the American middleweight pugilist, won the decision on points here from the French middleweight, Marcel Moreau. The American throughout showed the better form. Many fashionable women and prominent actresses were at the ringside.

HOPPE WINS 18.1 TITLE.

PITTSBURGH, March 20.—Willie J. Hoppe, holder of the 18.2 balk line billiard championship, added the 18.1 championship to his list last night by defeating Ora Morningstar 500 to 211 in 32 innings. Hoppe ran 96 in the thirteenth inning.

BOUT FOR MANDOT.

NEW ORLEANS, March 20.—Joe Mandot and Johnny Lore of New York will meet in a lightweight battle of ten rounds in New Orleans, April 7. The winner is to fight Young Brown. Should Mandot be successful he expects to meet Joe Rivers in May.

JIM THORPE THE STAR.

WACO, Texas, March 20.—Jim Thorpe scored only three runs, smashed out only three hits, and played an errorless game at first base yesterday for the Giants in a game here.

INVITE CHESS PLAYERS.

NEW YORK, March 20.—Invitations were extended today to leading American chess players to take part in the international chess tournament in Havana next January for a $10,000 purse.

Australian Tennis Players to Sail for U. S. April 5

SYDNEY, Australia, March 20.—The Australian lawn tennis team was said for Vancouver, B. C., on the steamship Niagara, leaving Sydney, April 5, and will meet the American team in the preliminary tie for the Dwight F. Davis international lawn tennis challenge cup. This is in accordance with the decision expressed by the Americans that the Australian contest should be played in the United States. Horace Rice will represent Anthony F. Wedding on the team. Wedding being unable to pay. The other Australians are B. M. Dunne and Mr. Jones.

The names which will rank in the preliminary ties to decide a challenger for the cup are:

ARCHER TO MANAGE IN FEDERAL LEAGUE

CINCINNATI, O., March 20.—That Jimmy Archer, veteran catcher, will be given a managership in the Federal League if he decides to quit the major organization was asserted at baseball parties here. Archer will be given a substantial salary and a percentage and will direct and manage a team. It was intimated that he would play either with Detroit or St. Louis. Rumors of Cobb's deal by have guaranteed a fund sufficient to maintain a club there and have promised ground for a park. Archer will probably be given the Kentucky club.

DARTMOUTH NINE IN OUTDOOR PRACTICE

HANOVER, N. H., March 20.—For the first time in years the Dartmouth baseball team has been able to start outdoor practice before the end of the Spring vacation. Coach Wood had all candidates out yesterday, and a snappy three-hour workout was held. The outfield candidates took full advantage of the chance and devoted most of the afternoon to catching long flies. All the men were drilled at base running and batting.

SANDS IS LOST TO CAMBRIDGE LATIN

The chances of Dona d Sands, the crack Cambridge Latin School athlete, competing in athletics this Spring are not very bright. He has been forbidden to compete by his physician because he has a slight case of enlargement of the heart.

M'CARTY MADE B. C. TRACK LEADER

The Boston College High School track team held a second election for the captaincy of track for next season, as the result of a protest that had been entered about certain members of the squad voting who were members of the track team, had not been letter men. When the call for this election was made, it was stated that only letter men would be allowed to vote, and how these men voted without being protested at the meeting is not known.

At the first election Thomas F. Burek '14 Roxbury, the sterling 1,000-yarder, who has represented the James Street School for the last two years in a manner that is worthy of great praise, and who has all the signs of being a contender for previous honors in that event next season. Among the school boys, was selected over two other candidates. The other candidates were Flanagan, a 300 yard man, and Leo McCarthy, the star 100-yarder.

The candidates at the second election were Burke and McCarthy, Flanagan having withdrawn from the contest. The feeling was intense and there was much doubt as to who would be chosen at this election. When the ballots were counted Leo McCarthy was the victor, receiving one more vote than Burke.

MARQUARD TO GET $8,500 SALARY

LOS ANGELES, March 20.—"Rube" Marquard, one of the star pitchers of the New York Nationals last year, has left for Houston, Tex., to join his team. It was reported on what was said to be reliable authority that the contract which Marquard signed in San Francisco provided for an annual salary of $8,500 for three years. In addition to that, Scout Kinsella of the Giants is said to have given him a bonus of $1,500 for signing.

RAIN PLAYS HAVOC WITH TY'S GAMES

AUGUSTA, Ga., March 20.—Rain fell all day yesterday and the game here between Ty Cobb's All Georgians and the Superbas had to be called off. Cobb left today for Newberry, S. C., where he is scheduled to play a game. Cobb is more than anxious to play here, and if necessary he will cancel a game he has already scheduled for the early part of next week so that he can play the Superbas in this city, from whence he graduated.

The House on the Marsh

A CELEBRATED NOVEL BY FLORENCE WARDEN

SYNOPSIS

Miss Christie secures a position as governess in the Rayner home, which is situated on a desolate marsh. A cloud of mystery which envelops the life of Mr. and Mrs. Rayner and the children, who show an intense dislike for their father, puzzles the new governess. Laurence Neale, a friend of the family, warns Miss Christie by making veiled insinuations against Mr. Rayner, who shows a fondness for the governess that arouses the jealousy of Neale. Sarah, a servant, who seems to hold the key to Rayner's secrets, becomes jealous of Miss Christie and mounts the girl on her beauty. A set of supposed tragedy dims the air. A strange man visits Sarah, and disappears again as mysteriously as he came. Dr. Maitland, a retired magistrate, whose grandchildren the governess patients never received, visits the house frequently. Through her pupil Miss Christie hears that, following loud words, Mr. Rayner ordered his wife, forcing her into unconsciousness.

PART I

THIS tirade amazed me; but it also made me angry. I could not let him abuse a person whom I liked and who had been consistently kind to me, without protest.

"You surely cannot judge him as well as I, a member of his household," said I, coolly. "Whether he is a snob or not I cannot tell, because I don't quite know what it means. But I do know that he is kind to his wife, and his children, and servants and dependents, and"——

"Kind to his wife, do you say? I should not call it kindness to shut up my wife in the darkest, dampest corner of a dark, damp house, until she is as spiritless and silent as a specter, and then invent absurd lies to account for the very natural change in her looks and spirits."

"What do you mean? What lies?"

"The stories he told you about her when you first came. He would never have tried them on an unsuspecting girl, had, of course, he never thought you would repeat them to me."

"I wish I hadn't," said I indignantly. "You have known Mr. and Mrs. Rayner only during the three years that they have lived here. What proof have you that the things he told me were not true?"

"No proof. Miss Christie, but a man's common sense," said he excitedly. "No more proof than of another fact of which I am equally certain; that he is surely killing his wife as if he were making her drink poison."

"How dare you say such a thing?" I cried. "You have no right to utter it, even if you think it. You are giving way to the most cruel prejudice against a man whose only fault is that he cannot contentedly lead the dull life his neighbors do. I suppose you think, like the villagers, that to play the violin is an impious action, and that it is a shocking thing for him to go to the races."

Hints at Dark Acts

"If he did nothing worse than that I should think no worse of him than you do, Miss Christie. But I think you will allow that a man who has lived within half a mile of another man for nearly three years must know more of his character than a young innocent girl who has seen him at his best only for a month."

"But you cannot judge a man fairly until you have seen him continually in his own home. I have seen Mr. Rayner among his family; I have played for him, walked with him, had long talks with him; and I must surely know him better than you, who have only an ordinary acquaintance with him."

Mr. Neale drew himself up very stiffly, and the color rushed to his forehead. He was getting really angry.

"No doubt, Miss Christie, you know him a great deal better than I do. I have never played for him, and I have not found either talks or walks with him particularly delightful. But then I dare say he did not try so hard to be agreeable to me as he did to you."

Lowly I managed to keep back tears, so that I could return to the drawing-room with the flowers I had gathered before they began to wonder why I had been so long. Mr. Neale had told me that the note from Mrs. Manners which Mr. Neale had brought was to ask that the articles we were making for the sale—a sort of bazaar to be held in June, at which one of the attractions of the annual school treat—which I learned is to be held within a week, and is to be thought and arranged before the end day arrived and Miss Christie would be glad to know if she would be able to help at the sale, and, if so, what new work could be done. Mrs. Manners within the next few days to settle what should be her share of the work.

I was delighted at the thought of this little excitement, and, although Mr. Rayner warned me that I should have nothing more to do than to see the pretty trifles I had worked finished by my old women, who would not buy them, and to have the trouble of over me my clumsy children [illegible] I felt that the treat would be [illegible] prospect.

Next evening I debated with myself whether it was not too damp and swampy for me to go and peep at my nest and see if the water had subsided and left the top of the bricks dry. I chose afterward to think that it was some supernatural influence that led me to decide that I would put on my goloshes and go

Finds Mysterious Note

When I got there I found on the bough which formed my seat a basket of Gloire de Dijon roses, and the stalk of the uppermost one was stuck through a little note. I never doubted those roses were for me; I felt sure Neale had put them there. I looked searchingly around me in all directions before I took up the rose which carried the note and carefully slipped it off. It contained these words:

"For Miss Christie, with the sincere apologies of someone who would not willingly have offended her for the whole world."

I did not know the writing, but I knew whom it was from. I think, if I had been quite sure that no one could have seen me, I should have raised the note to my lips, I was so happy. But, though I could see no one, the fact of the basket arriving so surely at my secret haunt seemed to argue the existence of a supernatural agency in dealing with one who could not be too discreet; so I only put the note in my pocket and returned to the house with my flowers. I put them in water as soon as I had sneaked upstairs to my room with them.

The supernatural agency could not follow me there, so I kept that night with the note under my pillow.

"YOU are getting pale again, my dear child," said Mr. Rayner to me the very next morning—he met me at the foot of the stairs, dressed for my walk with Haides. "We must find some means of bringing those roses peeping once more to your cheeks again. You work too hard at those self-imposed evening tasks, I am afraid."

"Oh, no, indeed I don't, Mr. Rayner! I am getting very lazy; I haven't done anything for those six weeks."

The fact was that I had felt too languid even to sit down and write, and had wasted the last two evenings listlessly turning over the pages of a book I did not read.

"Ah, then, you want a change of air. Now, how to give it to you without letting you go away—for we can't spare you even for a week. You will think me a magician if I procure you a change of air without leaving this house, will you, Miss Christie? Yet I think I can manage it. You must give me a few days to look about for my weird, and, hey, presto the thing will be done."

Laughed at Promise

I laughed at these promises, looking upon them as the lightest of jests, but the very next day I met a workman upon the staircase, and Mr. Rayner asked me mysteriously at dinner whether I had seen his familiar spirit about, adding that the spirit wore a paper cap and a dirty artisan's guise, and smelt of lime.

The spirit pervaded the house for two days. I met him in the garden holding very unspiritual converse with Jane; I met him to my room taking the measure of my bedstead. I met him in the passage carrying what looked like thin sheets of tin and rolls of wall paper, and I heard sounds of heavy boots in the turret above my room. Then I saw no more of him, but still there were unaccustomed sounds over my head, sounds of footsteps and of knocking, and I met sometimes Jane and sometimes Sarah coming out of the door which I had never known unlocked before, but which I now discovered led to a narrow staircase that I guessed was the way to the turret.

On the fourth day when I went to my room I found it all done. I found it all dismantled, the bed and most of the furniture gone, and little Jane busily engaged in taking my books from their shelf and enjoying my discomfiture with delighted giggles, not at all disconcerted at being caught making an unheard of liberty.

"What does this mean, Jane? I can't sleep on the floor; and where are you going with my books?" I cried in one breath.

"I don't know nothing about it, Miss; but it's Mr. Rayner's orders," said she, with another irrepressible laugh at my bewildered face.

I was turning to the door to wander forth, I did not know exactly whither, to try to find an explanation of this most extraordinary state of things, when Sarah came in. Her dark, frowning face offered a strong contrast to that of laughing Jane.

"Sarah, can you tell me what this means?" said I.

"Mr. Rayner has ordered the room in the turret to be prepared for you," said she, shortly. "Perhaps you will be kind enough to manage down here till after tea, as it is his orders that you shouldn't be shown up till the room is quite ready."

Business Woman's Club Already a Success, Says Miss Sullivan

Miss Josephine Sullivan, one of the charter members of the Business Woman's Club, who is enthusiastic ov er the future of the organization.

THE Business Woman's Club of Boston, with headquarters at No. 144 Bowdoin street, is now six months old and, according to Miss Josephine Sullivan, one of the charter members, it' is a grand success.

Since the club opened last October nearly four hundred members have joined, and, judging from inside reports, there will be, before many months, the full contingent of eight hundred, with a waiting list besides.

"There is nothing just like it in the country or in the world," asserted Miss Sullivan, when asked how the club is progressing.

"I myself was enthusiastic when I joined, because for a long time I had been hoping for just such a club, and when it really was started I was overjoyed and filled with enthusiasm at the thought of what an important place in the community a business woman's club must fill. No hopes are being realized and I am even more enthusiastic than I was at first.

"I am not the only one who loves the club, for many others express themselves in the same ardent way. I had a friend who ridiculed the idea of joining just for social purposes. She was finally persuaded to become a member for the advantages it might bring her in a business way, and now, having made many acquaintances and found herself among congenial company, she would not give up the social element in the club life."

A talk with Miss Sullivan soon convinces one that the Woman's Business Club is not a mere imitation of the Boston City Club.

The women who have planned and put into operation this unique organization have based it upon a very definite philosophy that has as its foundation the inspiration and development of those women in the community who belong to the great producing public.

"We draw the line more or less strictly," says Miss Sullivan, "between those who are actually connected with the business world of production and the professions and philanthropic callings. The club contains no doctors, dentists, nurses, teachers, artists or writers, unless they happen to be connected very closely with business or manufacturing concerns.

"The idea of the Business Woman's Club being the place for the transaction of business or even for conferences preparatory to any business deal was flouted by Miss Sullivan.

"We have no such thought," she declared. "And any business conversations that take place are of a general nature and often relate to economic and broad social problems.

"I should like it distinctly understood that the club is no place for feminine gossip. Even discussions about the particular business in which the members happen to be engaged is discouraged, especially when it becomes personal as regards particular firms.

"Of course," she continued, "there are all sorts of opinions to be found among the members and we as a club shall not take a public stand upon any question unless it happens to be such that there is unanimity of disagreement within our ranks. There are in the club many strong suffragists and many with opposite views.

"After all, the club is really more of a place to manufacture enthusiasm and interest in life, with inspiration to do our best in whatever calling with which we happen to be connected. We come up from our offices tired and often out of sorts and we meet here, either at lunch or in the evening, successful women who have worked and struggled through what we are experiencing, and their success in spires us with renewed energy and determination to win.

"Please do not think," she continued, "that association and friendly intercourse are the only or chief elements of the club. There has been running through the Winter a course of lectures, and we have also been having social evenings with dancing and entertainments of different kinds. There are afternoon teas and the restaurant serves meals to an average of a hundred people daily.

"Our club building, which was remodeled from a large lodging house, is complete in its equipment, and a tour of inspection proves the visitor to realize how self-sufficient the twentieth century woman has become. No male escort is to be seen from top to bottom, and the elevator runs itself by automatic buttons.

The rapidity with which the club has grown causes the leaders to predict a full membership in the comparatively near future, and those who are thinking of joining the Business Women's Club are requested to give in their names at once. "The doors are moderate and the advantages great," is Miss Sullivan's word to the public.

Married Life the Third Year

By MABEL HERBERT URNER

Helen Loses a Friend by Trying at Great Inconvenience to Accommodate Her.

IT was Monday morning, and Helen was making out the grocery list when the phone rang.

"Oh, Mrs. Curtis!" Mrs. Dawson's voice thrilled excitedly. "Will you do something for me—a very great favor?"

"Why, yes—of course," answered Helen, wonderingly, yet resenting this way of putting a request.

"You know we're sailing next Tuesday, and I'm almost desperate about the laundry! Our woman's been sick for two weeks. I've let it go thinking she'd be able to come—and now I don't know WHAT to do! Couldn't you get me your woman?"

"Why, I'd like to, but Mrs. O'Reilly has her regular patrons and every one of her days are taken."

"Oh, can't you arrange it somehow? If you'd write her that a friend of yours is sailing and simply MUST have her clothes—I'm sure she'd manage to come. I wouldn't bother you," in an injured tone, "if I wasn't so desperate."

"You know I'll do anything I can," protested Helen. "I'll write her now to call you up the first thing in the morning"—then you can talk with her yourself."

"That's dear of you," effused Mrs. Dawson. "And try to get her for two days if you can. It's such a huge washing—I'm sure she couldn't do it all in one."

Another Favor Requested.

Helen was almost certain that Mrs. O'Reilly had no free days. However, she wrote a postcard asking her to call up Mrs. Dawson in the morning, explaining that she was sailing and that she hoped she could help her out.

The next day about 10 Mrs. Dawson again phoned Helen. She began in much the same way.

"Oh, my dear, I'm going to ask the GREATEST favor—something that'll make me eternally grateful! You'll do it for me —won't you?"

Again Helen murmured a bewildered "Why, yes—if I can."

"Mrs. O'Reilly always washes for you Friday, doesn't she? Well, will you give me your day? I know it's a lot to ask —but I'm DESPERATE! She's just called up and says she hasn't a single free day, but I made her promise that she'd come Friday if you were willing. Then I'll persuade her to come back and finish up Sunday."

"Well, I couldn't do that," stammered Helen. "If I gave up Friday I'd have to wait another whole week, for that's the only day I can have the laundry down stairs."

"Well, couldn't you let it go over—just is once? I wouldn't ask you if there as any other way. But there's a lot of ay fine things I don't dare send to e laundry, and I can't sail with a trunk full of soiled clothes."

Helen hardly knew what to say. She had never let the washing go two weeks. It would upset everything. But Mrs. Dawson kept on insistently until she murmured a reluctant consent.

Helen Is Furious

But as soon as she hung up the receiver she was furious at herself for yielding. What right had Mrs. Dawson to ask such a thing? Of course she should do anything in reason to accommodate a friend, but this was an imposition. They were short of linen, too. She was not sure there would be enough for dishes and napkins. Maggie would have to wash out some during the week, and that would mean she would be busy for days—no, it would be better to send them to the laundry.

But why should not Mrs. Dawson send HER things to the laundry? she asked herself indignantly. It was all very well for her to say she'd send a check "if she ruined," but Helen knew the real reason was that she did not want to pay the price.

As to her whole household was to be upset to save Mrs. Dawson a few dollars! The more Helen thought of it the more indignant she became.

This was Wednesday and it happened that Mrs. O'Reilly washed on Wednesday for a family in the Marquett—just a block above, so that evening about 6 she stopped to see Helen on her way home. She seemed to be sure that Helen was really willing to give up "her day."

By this time Helen was far from willing, but as she had already promised, she saw no way out of it now.

"She says she's got a two weeks' wash," complained Mrs. O'Reilly, who seemed reluctant to go, "and wants me Sunday, too. Suppose she knows nobody works Sundays without extra pay."

"Oh, of course," murmured Helen. "I'm sure if you go Sunday Mrs. Dawson will pay you very well. And since she's sailing Tuesday, I suppose we ought to help her out."

"Well, I'll go," reluctantly, "seeing she's a friend of yours."

It was Saturday when Helen called on Mrs. Dawson to tell her good-by, and to give her the address of the London chambers where she and Warren had stopped last Summer. Mrs. Dawson was packing and Helen insisted on not interrupting her.

"There's one trunk I can't pack," she complained. "until I get the rest of the laundry. It's been dreadful having to wait for the clothes this way. She promised to come back tomorrow, but I suppose you can't depend on any of them. If she disappoints me it'll simply mean I'll have a trunk full of soiled clothes.

A Fast Worker

"She'll come if she promised—Mrs. O'Reilly's very dependable."

"Well, I hope so, but I don't think she's very fast. My woman could have done twice what she did yesterday."

"Why, I think Mrs. O'Reilly is a very fast worker," bristled Helen. "She does all our washing and most of the ironing in one day."

"But I have so many fine hand-made things," explained Mrs. Dawson, patronizingly. "Of course PLAIN clothes one can do much faster."

Helen was furious. With difficulty she refrained from saying she thought her things were quite as fine as Mrs. Dawson's. And the ingratitude of it all! Instead of being elderly grateful to Helen for giving up "her day"—she was complaining Mrs. O'Reilly's work.

Almost at once Helen rose to go. She told Mrs. Dawson good by and wished her a pleasant voyage, but she did so very frigidly.

There were many things in the next few days to remind Helen of the inconvenience of letting the washing go for two weeks. The clothes hamper was overcrowded, and there were two pillow-cases full in the bottom of the hall closet.

"What the Dickens are these doing here?" growled Warren one morning as he stumbled over them in getting something off the shelf.

"Oh, those are soiled clothes, dear; I didn't have any place else to put them."

Warren's Opinion.

"What's the matter with the clothes hamper?"

"It's full—Mrs. O'Reilly didn't wash this week." Here Helen paused; she had not intended telling Warren about Mrs. Dawson, but now her rankling resentment urged her on.

"Huh, that's nerve for you," when Helen finished an account of her grievance. "She worked you, all right. Of course, she's not grateful. People are never grateful when you do things for them—they're usually grouchy 'cause you don't do more. But I thought you were through recommending any one that worked for you? Had a good lesson about that last Summer, didn't you—when you recommended that seamstress?"

"I know, dear, but I won't need another lesson—this'll be enough."

But the incident was not yet closed. Helen had still to hear from Mrs. O'Reilly when she came the following Friday. She always thought her a very good-natured Irish woman, but now she was much incensed.

"What do you think, ma'am, I worked there on Sunday from half-past 8 until 6 and what do you think she wanted to pay me?"

Helen, full of misgivings, could only murmur: "I don't know."

"Not a CENT extra! She came into the kitchen just 'fore I left and put a dollar and sixty cents on the table. 'I believe that's right,' she said—'a dollar and a half and your car fare.'

"And what did you say?" asked Helen, sensing something unpleasant.

"I said: 'No, ma'am, that AIN'T right. I told her she couldn't get nobody to work on Sunday for any dollar and a half, that only did it to oblige you, and that you said of course she'd pay me more.'"

"Oh, you DIDN'T say that!" exclaimed Helen, dismayed.

She Lost a Friend

"Why, yes, ma'am, that's what you said. YOU wouldn't have asked me to work Sundays for any dollar and a half! She said that's all 'twas worth, but she didn't want to have no words about it, so she put down another fifty cents. I was half minded to go off and leave it there. She acted as though she needed it more than me."

Then, fearing that she had said too much, as Helen remained forbiddingly quiet, she added, hastily: "I don't mean no disrespect to you, ma'am, but I don't never want to wash for her again."

But Helen was thinking of the steamer letter she had NOT received. Last year Mrs. Dawson had gone to Europe, and the year before, and both times she had sent Helen a note from the steamer. But this time there had been no note—not even a post card. And now Helen understood why. Undoubtedly Mrs. Dawson thought she had "talked her over" with the washerwoman and had posted her to ask for the extra money.

So she had given up "her day," had let her washing go over two weeks, and put herself to all this inconvenience to accommodate a friend, and for her pains—she had probably lost that friend.

Let Father Do It

Daughter—Shall I take an umbrella to post this letter, mother?

Mother—No, stay in the house; it isn't a fit night for a dog to be out; let your father post the letter.

"When the Old Spring Fret Comes O'er You" By Nell Brinkley

Copyright, 1913, by American-Journal-Examiner

"The Spring day he rode on the old cart along country lanes and the little maid beside him and the gypsy lad and his lass they met fiddling and dancing down the way" to come back to the country for her.

THESE days, that are cold and uncomfortable between times, are yet Spring days. You know it 'cause last night, when you stepped out-a-doors for a little minute, you sniffed the Spring in the air. You did it unconsciously—you who are shut inside four walls and compassed by the streets of the city.

But once upon a day your forefathers sniffed in just such a fashion, and really knew the Spring was come by the feel of things. You say, "I smell Spring in the air," but laugh at yourself when you say it.

Away out in the West, where the barren prairies stretch away to the blue hills that rise into a blue sky, the Spring is coming. The country is all tan and brown, and is splotched here and there with a drift of snow, but when the whole of it is seen there is a hint of green—vague and undefined; but it says the Spring is here.

And so it is with the heart of many a man who is cooped up in the city these days. "The old Spring fret" has him in its grip, and he thinks of times before he left the country in his search for fame and wealth. He thinks of one Spring day when he rode on the old cart along country lanes—and the little maid beside him who was more treasure than he has ever been able to win in his battle with the world. They talked of many things they intended to do—and ever his story was of "over the hills and far away," for the little piper piped to him tales of the city.

And when they met a gypsy lover and his lass fiddling down the way, he asked the maid if she would be content to trudge with him through all the world. She was a home body, and the prospect did not bring her great joy; so the gypsy idea went out of their heads with the newer plan of his seeking in the city for wealth—and the plan that he was to come back to the country for her.

This was never more than a plan, 'cause he knew the country blossom would fade in the town—and then there were so many town blossoms—hothouse plants compared with his love in the country—and so he never did go back for her.

When these days come and bring the Spring so that you can sniff it, many a man wishes he could once more go into the country and find his lost youth and his lost love there together. He would give all he has in the way of worldly possessions for this one gift. He has to satisfy his old Spring fret in commoner ways, and thinks not of gypsying along the wild ways with the one girl in all the world—the girl he left behind him. Instead, he plans a week or a month in the woods or in the hills when Spring really does come over all the land and is something more tangible than a mere sniff in the air.

Hunting a Husband

By VIRGINIA TERHUNE VAN DE WATER

Dr. Haynes advises the widow to return to town, and she is cheered at the thought of the shopping she must do

WHEN Beatrice Minor left the Robbins dining room she glanced at the stairs, but decided that they were too steep for her to climb them so soon after having descended them. Moreover, she felt as if she would stifle in the house. She longed to be out of doors.

Perhaps she could breathe better there than inside, where, her distorted imagination told her, the fumes of drugs from the third floor room hung in the air. So she went hastily out upon the verandа, and came face to face with Dr. Haynes, who was just climbing the steps. He had walked over from the hotel and was flushed and warm. But he flushed still more warmly with pleasure at sight of her.

"Well!" he exclaimed, as he shook hands with her, "you are making great progress!" Noting her agitated countenance he spoke more gently. "You look pale. Has the exertion of coming downstairs been too much for you?"

Without waiting for an answer he led her across the verandа to an easy chair and put a footstool under her feet. Then, drawing up a chair for himself, he repeated his question.

"The physical exertion has not been too great," she said, "but—oh—Dr. Haynes—I wish I had stayed in my room as usual!"

"Oh, no, you don't," remonstrated the physician. "It is good for you to move about a little. Although it may weary you a bit, each day you will be able to do a little more."

She Tells Dr. Haynes

"It is not the weariness I mind," said the woman plaintively. "But"——

"Go on," urged the man as she hesitated, "tell me all about it."

"Well, I came down to breakfast, and Miss Drake—you know, Paul Maynard's nurse"—she paused embarrassedly as she mentioned Paul's name, but the doctor did not appear to notice it.

"The nurse as good as told me that her patient was worse because I had insisted upon seeing him yesterday—and Helen resented that on my account and said some severe things to her. Then Dr. Yeager came into the room after the nurse had gone back upstairs, and he said that Paul was worse last night—and then I could stand it no longer, and came out here."

"Without eating any breakfast?" queried the physician.

"Oh, I don't know!" wailed Beatrice. "I think I drank some coffee, and that was all I wanted anyway. Food would have choked me. I feel as if everybody blamed me for Paul's condition."

"Everybody be hanged!" exploded the man. "That is nonsense, child!" He took her trembling hand and stroked it gently. "Listen," he went on, "let's look at this matter calmly and talk sense. It is not your fault that Paul Maynard was hurt in saving your children."

The woman closed her eyes with a shudder, but the speaker, seemingly unobservant of her action, went on:

"Maynard only did what Keith Lacy tried just as hard to do and failed in doing because he was not as strong as Paul. But I do not find you blaming yourself for his burns—do you?"

Beatrice shook her head, her eyes still closed. "I am sorry for him, of course," she admitted, "but he is not as badly hurt as—the other."

"No, fortunately he is not, but that is not his fault either." He laughed lightly. "Come, my dear, be sensible! How are you to blame for either man's condition? and why torture yourself by thinking of either?"

"The Nurse Blames Me"

"But," she insisted, "the nurse blames me and Dr. Yeager does. And, in a way, I can understand that they thought I was heartless yesterday because I shrank from that poor, bandaged body up there on the bed. But the sight made me sick and frightened—and he used to be so handsome! Oh, dear!"—snatching her hand from the physician's clasp and passing her fingers to her eyes—"I wish I could forget it all! I wish I could go home—back to Boston!"

"You shall go," the physician assured her.

"When?" she asked eagerly.

"That depends upon yourself. If you keep calm and quiet, you shall go in a few days. If you let yourself get into a nervous condition, I do not know how much longer you may have to remain here."

"I will try to keep calm and get well," promised Beatrice. "But how am I to pack trunks and take that journey when I feel so tired all the time?"

The doctor smiled. "You forget that trunks will not be needed, as all your clothing, except the dress you had on that night was burned. This wrapper you have on now is Mrs. Robbins', isn't it?" And, as she nodded assent, he continued: "And the kiddies are wearing the Robbins children's clothes—which are, by the way, miles too big for them."

"Yes," said Beatrice sadly. "I try not to worry, but how about the insurance I had on my clothing? It was well insured, I am sure."

Things Look Brighter

"Oh, you will get that all right," the physician affirmed. "And when you get home, you can put on one of the dresses you have there and go downtown and buy lots of pretty new things with your insurance money."

The widow flushed with delight. "I had not thought of the fun of getting the new clothes," she remarked.

"And as to the journey home," the physician said, "you will take that in my car. And that reminds me—Mary (whom you remember Mrs. Robbins sent away to town after the fire) called on me at my office yesterday afternoon and asked me to intercede with you to take her back when you return to the city. Why not let her come out for the children and take them in on the train?"

"Lovely!" exclaimed Beatrice, clasping her hands. "I have been wishing I could get her back. Oh!" (with a sigh of relief) "how good you are, and how much brighter things look than they did! How much longer shall you be coming out here for visits after our return home?"

"Not at all," said the man softly. Again she smiled brightly. The physician, watching her, hoped that the transformation was due to her thought of him and his kindness, and not of the prospect of the insurance money and new clothes.

Stock Prices; Financial News

Stock markets reflected the fact that they are on the eve of a three-day holiday. Trading was dull and interest lacking. The Mellen stocks showed improvement in early trading. Boston & Maine opened at 69, off ¼, but within half an hour sold up to 70. New Haven opened at 116, a gain of ¼, and held up to 118⅛, within an hour or so. United Shoe declined fractionally. Copper issues were irregular. Osceola made a two-point gain.

The New York market was quiet and had a good tone. Prices changes among leaders were narrow.

Specialties Opened Strong.

Strength of a number of specialties was the most interesting feature at the opening of the New York market, Woolworth making a gain of 1¾ and National Biscuit a point. An advance of ½ was scored by Mexican Petroleum and gains were also made by American Ice Securities, California Petroleum and U. S. Rubber.

The list was steady although buying was not aggressive. Despite the rumors of a government suit likely to be brought against American Smelting, the stock was ⅝ higher at the beginning and subsequently increased this advance. Amalgamated was an active issue, fluctuating between 68 and 68¾. It closed Wednesday at 68¼. Reading began unchanged, but by 10:30 had gained ½. Among the other gains were Utah Copper ⅝, Steel common ¼, Union Pacific ¼, Southern Pacific ⅝, Tennessee Copper ⅝, Pennsylvania ¼, Lehigh Valley ¼, St. Paul ⅝ and Corn Products Refining ¼.

The Curb was dull.

American stocks were quiet, but steady in London.

Profits in Coinage.

Uncle Sam "makes money" by making it. The Federal Government made the enormous profit of nearly $5,500,000 on the coinage of gold, nickels, dimes, quarters and halves during the fiscal year 1912.

George E. Roberts, director of the mint, announces that the Treasury earned a total of $5,852,200 on an investment of only $1,260,000 for the operation of the entire mint service, or almost 450 per cent.

Out of one pound of a compound of nickel and copper, costing about 23 cents, the government coins $4.55 worth of five cent pieces.

The seigniorage on subsidiary silver coins during the year was $4,568,000, while that on pennies and nickels was $1,849,000.

Last Year's Cotton Crop.

A cotton report just issued by the government census bureau shows the crop of 1912 to be 14,076,430 bales, counting round as half bales and including linters, compared with 16,109,949 for 1911 and 11,995,502 for 1910. Included in the statistics for 1912 are: Linters, 605,704 bales; sea island cotton, 72,434 bales; round bales, 31,525. The average gross weight of the bale was 507.8 pounds for 1912, compared with 504.4 for 1911, and 503.7 for 1910. Expressed in equivalent of 500-pound bales, the 1912 crop is 14,295,500, compared with 16,250,276 for 1911, and 12,006,688 for 1910. Cotton estimated by ginners and delinters as remaining to be ginned, and included in the statistics for 1912, amounts to 129,172 bales.

Copper Up in London.

The London standard warrants market was firmer today, spot copper being up 2s. 6d. and futures 5s. at both opening and closing.

As leading sellers of copper metal have disposed of about all stocks on hand not much fluctuation in price is expected for a time. There is not disposition to force sales. Demand is small, as domestic consumers are now well supplied for immediate needs and the monetary stringency in Europe is checking consumption abroad.

Reports of Great Foreign Banks.

The Bank of England's minimum rate of discount remains unchanged at 5 per cent. The weekly statement shows the proportion of the bank's reserve liabilities is now 40.50 per cent, against 41.70 last week and compares with an advance of from 40.50 to 43¼ per cent. in the corresponding week last year. Clearings through London banks for the week amounted to £344,810,000 against £278,100,000 last week and £316,003,000 last year.

The Imperial Bank of Germany has issued an interim report showing that on March 17 the uncovered notes amounted to 468,000,000 marks, which is 270,000,000 more than at the same time last year. Money for the settlement is being freely offered in Berlin at 8¾ per cent.

The Bank of France weekly statement shows an increase of 9,308,000 francs in gold and 2,916,000 in silver.

Financial News in Brief.

For February just the operating revenues of the Baltimore & Ohio increased $531,545. For eight months operating revenue increased $7,921,000, and the gain in net was $1,991,131. This does not include "outside operations" which, as estimated, will show a deficit, in net, for February, 1913, of $74,468.91, compared with a deficit of $31,852.77 for February, 1912.

The American Telephone & Telegraph Company, which is the holding company for the Bell system, reports for 1912 net earnings of $37,907,644, a gain of $4,606,208. After allowing for charges and dividends, there was a balance of $8,047,357, of which $2,800,000 was carried to reserve and $3,247,357 to surplus.

A seat on the New York Stock Exchange has been sold for $41,000. The price at the last previous sale was $45,000.

D. C. Jackling has been elected president of the Utah Power & Light Co. and W. S. McCormick senior vice-president.

The decrease last month, compared with February, 1912, of nearly $20,000,000 in the amount of principal domestic exports is attributed to the abnormally large amount of cotton exported in February, 1912. Last year it totalled more than $63,500,000; this year less than $34,000,000.

The New York sub-treasury gained $4,111,000 from banks yesterday and has gained $11,583,000 since Friday.

WILSON STAND HELP TO CHINA, FORBES HOLDS

By S. C. FORBES.

The Morgan interests claim it were asked by President Taft to plant an American financial foot in China. They responded by planting a spiked boot on China's throat.

The AMERICAN all along has protested vehemently against the strangulation of the young republic by a combination of international bankers. The iniquitous exactions of lenders, who insisted upon being also the spenders, have been held up to condemnation from time to time. The six-power banking group, holding a pistol at China's head, originally demanded subject surrender. They sought to force the needy government to grant usurers a monopoly for thirty years, during which the schemers could virtually dictate the terms China must pay them for every dollar borrowed. No other banker or syndicate of bankers was to be allowed to do business with Pekin.

Fought Holdup.

The holdup was so shameful that the Chinese authorities, beset though they were with pressing necessities, offered resistance. Public thought aroused worldwide sympathy and the sextette was obliged to modify its terms.

Britons were outraged by the part played by their government in supporting the financial plotters and a sort of apology, meant to be an explanation and by the foreign office, did not place Downing street in any favorable light. An attempt to intimidate British bankers into boycotting a loan arranged by Birch Crisp, a brilliant London banker, aroused intense indignation. In spite of all opposition, however, Crisp succeeded in floating a large loan.

President Wilson has effectively disarmed the American financiers in the holdup. His next step would be, and doubtless will be, the speedy recognition of the Chinese republican government. Such action would enhance China's prestige and enable her to conduct her financing on more advantageous terms.

I hear that interests outside the six-power syndicate are perfectly willing to supply China with funds without any governmental guarantee that United States troops will stand ready to collect the interest promptly. There are, fortunately, a few bankers not under the dominance of the Morgan house. It was stated last evening that China will be offered assistance by a group of bankers not only uncovering a generation to come. That the whole six-power combination will fail to get a dollar because Russia nor Japan has a dollar to spare to China. Berlin sends a brave dispatch about going on with the loan, but everyone in financial circles knows that Germany is in monetary straits and will be lucky if she does not collapse before another fortnight passes.

Chinese Crisp Clever.

Chinese Crisp, as they call him in London, is a wonderful fellow. He used to be an advertising solicitor for a South African weekly paper published in London. He was clever, beyond ordinary. A chance came to enter the financial arena and he took it like a shark readily. His methods were not those of the old school, and at one important juncture, after a series of enviable successes, he ran foul of a London banker of the first magnitude. This gentleman suddenly notified Crisp that an agreement the two had entered into would not be carried out; in other words, the banker sought to throw Crisp in a hole.

Crisp gave him an hour to write an abject apology and retract his threat and another to abide by the agreement, the alternative being the laying of the whole facts before the governors of the Bank of England. The big banker capitulated instanter.

This same Crisp will probably figure in future financial dealings with China. He has won his spurs, has demonstrated his ability to keep pledges in face of every opposition, and is now an important factor in the city, as London's financial district is termed.

Morgan Statement Laughable.

The Morgan statement issued last evening is laughable. It points the bankers as the only ready to serve the administration irrespective of the heavy risks involved. There were risks, but all on China's side.

At last a better day should dawn for long-suffering China. The United States can help by immediately recognizing the new republic. To do so is not only a duty, but ought to be a pleasure.

J. P. MORGAN HOLDS DIRECTORSHIP IN 78 CORPORATIONS

NEW YORK, March 20.—The system of interlocking directorates of corporations, which the government claims "is incompatible with the health commercial life of the nation," is shown in the report of the government attorneys against the Steel Trust.

The report proves that George P. Baker, during the last decade, has been a director in eighty-seven banks. Other "busy" directors are J. P. Morgan, with seventy-eight directorates; C. M. Schwab, seventy-four; E. C. Converse, sixty-five; Charles Steele, fifty-two; E. H. Gary, seventy-two; P. A. B. Widener, thirty-two; Daniel G. Reid, thirty; Robert Winsor, thirty-four, and the late H. H. Rogers, thirty-four.

CLAIM LEPERS COST STATE $25,000 EACH

Each of the dozen lepers treated at Penikese Island has cost the State $15,000, and by the time they die will have cost $10,000 more, according to Edward F. McSweeney, chairman of the trustees of the Consumptives' Home, in a statement issued by him, attacking what he terms "institutionalization" in Massachusetts.

Seek Identity of Modest Hero in T Wharf Rescue

Hundreds of people who watched a plucky rescue from drowning near T Wharf, are wondering today as to the identity of the man who without hesitation plunged into the water and after a fight in which he nearly met death, saved Thomas Smith, who had fallen from a fishing schooner.

The hero even scorned a purse which was made up for him by witnesses of the deed, and walked away refusing to tell his name.

"It was just what anybody would have done," was the only comment he would make.

Smith, a Gloucester fisherman, was stunned when he fell, his head striking another vessel's schooner. His mates tried to reach him and threw dories into the water. Smith went down, however, just as the rescuer arrived on the wharf. He was in overalls and jumper, and immediately leaped into the water and pounded to the spot where Smith had disappeared.

After a struggle, he rose to the top with the stunned man, and was pulled on board the fishing schooner Lucania. He was nearly unconscious, but was revived, and walked off without stopping to pin any medals on his breast.

Death Is Very Often Attributed to Other Than the Real Cause

Science Has Proved That An Unparalleled Amount of Cases of Nervous Debility Are Found In Every Part Of the United States And Finds That It Is Due to the Modern Conditions of Life Which Make Health Impossible—Tona Vita Is the Only Relief For This Condition.

In times of peace prepare for war! The cruelest war that has ever been waged is the war of disease against the human body.

More than half the death certificates that are marked pneumonia, typhoid fever, inflammation, kidney disease, etc., should really be marked nervous debility. For pneumonia when it has a sound nervous system at the time disease strikes them can nearly always quickly regain their health.

The world is full of people who are suffering from nervous debility; they are listless, perpetually tired and lack ambition, and directly disease strikes them they have not the fighting power to combat sickness, and just die from having no desire to live.

Nervous debility is the fault of the century in which we live. It is the attendant evil of the ceaseless battle for existence. Tona Vita is the logical relief for this ailments, since it brings the body back to Nature.

A person who has fortified his or her body with a tonic of this nature is ten times better able to cast off the attacks of all ailments than one whose body is untonified.

Tona Vita is being handled by all local drug stores.

JUDGES STUDY "READY MONEY" PRIZE LETTERS

The Ready Money contest is ended—it all over except the shouting of the winners.

The last hours of this interesting contest for AMERICAN readers brought avalanches from every State in New England and it is now up to the judges to read the thousands of replies and pick the prize winners.

No contest ever conducted by this paper has aroused a keener interest among its readers. "Ready Money" is a timely topic for discussion at any time, and in this case the feminine side of the subject is merely added to its timeliness.

Do women love money more than do men?

That was the question upon which essays were invited, and it would appear from the answers received that nearly everybody in this country of ours has had a solution to the query.

At any rate the judges are swamped under the weight of so many answers and it may be several days before the decision can be made.

Watch the AMERICAN for the result. Remember, some of you will receive cash prizes and others will be the guests of the AMERICAN at a performance of "Ready Money" at the Shubert Theatre.

A Rotten Egg Killed a Guinea Pig

And the Blood of THAT Guinea Pig Killed ANOTHER Guinea Pig. What Is YOUR Opinion of Professors and Merchants Who Say That Rotten Eggs May Be Consumed by the Men, Women and BABIES of Massachusetts Without Harmful Results?

The same old forces are engaged in another great battle in Massachusetts.

On the one hand, Greed and Gluttony, with their secretaries, their high-priced attorneys, their friendly "professors," their dark-chamber "associations."

On the other hand, the great public, the ultimate consumer, with Law and Decency.

THIS is the Massachusetts fight against the FOOD POISONERS, the FOOD ADULTERATORS.

It is being made BY the AMERICAN, THROUGH Mr. Harry P. Cassidy, and the staff of reporters ASSISTING Mr. Cassidy, FOR the people of New England.

The battle opens, as our readers are aware, with an expose of the Boston dealers in ROTTEN EGGS. Mr. Cassidy has told about that traffic in the columns of this newspaper. His charges have been backed up with PROOF. The AMERICAN has called the worst offenders of the rotten-egg dealers by NAME and has PRINTED THEIR PICTURES.

No man can fight the System without inviting vicious attack. When the System can find no vulnerable place in the armor of an adversary's personal character it impugns the HONESTY OF HIS MOTIVES. Remember Glavis, Brandeis, Untermyer. Recall a part of what has been said about young Mr. Norman White of Brookline, first to tell New England, in the Massachusetts Legislature, what was CERTAIN TO FOLLOW a merger of our transportation interests.

Harry P. Cassidy's fight against the food adulterators of this town is the AMERICAN'S fight. And so, today, when we feel called upon to say something about Mr. Cassidy and the rotten egg business, we go for our words to the columns of the esteemed Evening Transcript.

And we find that, on the evening of June 1, 1912—some months before the AMERICAN invited Mr. Cassidy to come to Boston and lead the Boston fight—the conservative Transcript printed a column or more about the young man from Philadelphia, and in the course of that laudatory article said this:

> Cassidy is one of Philadelphia's assets. He is the man who has, single-handed, pushed a campaign for pure food that has drawn national attention to the so-called conservative city of Penn. He has battled and jostled and slashed the FOOD DOPERS to such a degree that now they run like FRIGHTENED RATS whenever his name is mentioned.
>
> Broad-shouldered, square-jowled, smooth-faced, with a twinkling, piercing, intelligent gray eye, he impresses one at first glance as a man who goes in to win what he sets out to do.
>
> * * *
>
> Cassidy's BIGGEST FIGHT OF ALL, perhaps, has been AGAINST THE DEALERS IN ROTTEN EGGS.
>
> Time was, and not long ago, when there was scarcely a bakehouse or confectionery establishment in the city (Philadelphia) that was not USING ROTTEN EGGS DAILY.
>
> The quest for the rotten egg dealers and users proved baffling for a time because, AFTER ROTTEN EGGS HAVE BEEN COOKED in cake or pastry or candy, IT IS ALMOST IMPOSSIBLE TO DETECT THEM.
>
> However, reports kept coming to Cassidy that people throughout the city (of Philadelphia) were being made ill by certain bakers' products, SO HE CAUSED AN EXPERIMENT TO BE MADE WITH A SAMPLE OF ROTTEN EGGS THAT HE FOUND, ON A GUINEA PIG, RESULTING IN THE DEATH OF THE GUINEA PIG IN A FEW HOURS.
>
> A small number of drops of blood from the heart of THIS guinea pig were injected into ANOTHER guinea pig, RESULTING IN ITS DEATH IN EIGHTEEN HOURS.
>
> Yet this poisonous mess was being peddled to dealers in food products, which were, being sold to the people of Philadelphia day after day, WITHOUT ANY SUSPICION BEING ABROAD OF THIS CRIMINAL PRACTICE.

And yet men in Boston, rushing eagerly to what is in effect a defence of the rotten-egg dealer, who disposes of his wares to bakers and caterers, talk glibly about "decomposed" eggs and "deteriorated" eggs and "indecent" eggs—when all the time they mean ROTTEN eggs—and tell us not to worry.

Some of them say, piously, that they BELIEVE FIRMLY IN PURE FOOD LEGISLATION, BUT DO NOT WANT ANYTHING DRASTIC. They would not be harsh or violent, extreme or radical, that is to say, with the scoundrels who POISON YOUR CHILDREN FOR PROFIT.

To this newspaper it is simply inconceivable that any HONEST merchant should oppose legislation aimed at the DISHONEST merchant who both robs and poisons the public by the sale of adulterated and unhealthful foodstuffs.

Certainly, at such a time as this, the HONEST merchants of Boston should STAND TOGETHER, with the people and FOR THE PUBLIC HEALTH.

Even on the side of his SELFISH interest, WHAT chance has the HONEST merchant—offering meritorious goods, paying the full price of such goods—in competition with the DISHONEST merchant who offers an ADULTERATED article at a MORE ATTRACTIVE price?

The loud and emphatic voice of SELF-INTEREST, no less than the still small voice of CONSCIENCE, calls upon the HONEST merchant to take HIS stand with the people of Massachusetts in the demand for PURE FOOD LAWS WITH TEETH IN THEM!

Drive the food poisoners from Massachusetts!

Have You Seen the Little Signs in Front of the Schoolhouses?

They Are All Alike—They Say: "POLITICIANS, KEEP OFF!" And They Mean Just What They Say

If there is any one thing upon which practically all the people of this great city are agreed it is that the SMALL School Committee is a BIG success.

The SMALL School Committee represents the CITY AS A WHOLE. Its members are ELECTED AT LARGE. If the course of any one committeeman is offensive or unsatisfactory to any CONSIDERABLE number of his fellow citizens, they can turn him out or reject him.

In the OLD School Committee, the LARGE committee, there was a member for each of the wards. Most of them offended EVERYBODY, sooner or later—especially those who LED IN THE FIGHTING and monopolized the morning papers—but the poor citizen, on Election Day, found that twenty-four of them were in other wards, beyond the reach of his lead pencil.

The reduction in the size of the School Committee has taken the POLITICS of the schools out of the newspapers, and THAT is good.

It has centred responsibility, and THAT is good.

When there were twenty-four committeemen—or was it ninety-six?—there were committeemen who were "there" with a few teachers or a janitor to LOOK AFTER. That was BAD, of course.

NOW all the committeemen look after ALL the schools. THAT couldn't be better.

The annual attempt to GO BACK, the annual effort to AMEND THE CHARTER AND ENLARGE THE SCHOOL COMMITTEE, is being made at the State House. This time we have not taken the trouble to get the name of the ambitious young legislator who LEADS THE MOVEMENT. He is bound to grow older and wiser. One day he will thank us for sparing him publicity on this occasion and on this page.

The AMERICAN cannot believe that the bill to enlarge the Boston School Committee has even the shadow of a chance before the Legislature of 1913.

Lest, however, there be any misunderstanding, the AMERICAN advises the members of the Legislature at large—and on this question this newspaper believes it voices the general sentiment of the Boston public—that there is ABSOLUTELY NO DEMAND IN THIS COMMUNITY FOR A LARGER SCHOOL COMMITTEE.

The schools of Boston are OUT OF POLITICS AND IN SAFE HANDS.

KEEP the schools out of politics! Keep POLITICS out of the schools!

And, quite as important, KEEP THE POLITICIANS OUT OF THE SCHOOLS!

The Standard Value of Polar Research to Humanity as a Whole

By GARRETT P. SERVISS

EVERY year hundreds of lives are sacrificed in railroad wrecks, but nobody thinks of asking whether it is worth while to ride on dangerous railroads.

Of course, it IS worth while; everybody understands that. You risk your life, it is true, but, on the other hand, you may make a thousand dollars or a hundred thousand, or win the one companion you would choose to have ever at your side, or, at the least, you may get a good dinner by taking the risk. All these things and many like them are universally regarded as so eminently worth while that the man or woman who would not face the chances of a railroad journey to obtain them would be ridiculed.

A few months ago, Captain Amundsen returned from an adventurous visit to the ice-guarded South Pole of the earth, and while people listened with thrills of interest to his story, they shook their heads and said: "It was a big risk!"

Now comes the tragic news that Captain Scott, after having also attained the South Pole, and found Amundsen's flag there ready to greet him, perished, with four brave companions, in an Antarctic blizzard encountered on the way back—and immediately the chorus of protests breaks out, and the insinuation is heard that Captain Scott was little better than a fool to risk his life in so unprofitable an enterprise.

"We knew already that the earth had poles," says one, "and we knew about what they were like. It was perfectly certain that nothing could be found there of any value to commerce or industry. The world will not be a cent the richer for the adventures of Captain Amundsen and the death of Captain Scott."

Another says. "We have learned that coal exists on the borders of the Antarctic continent. Why did not Captain Scott try to uncover that, and invent a means of getting it to market, instead of throwing away his life on a foolhardy trip over mountains of eternal ice."

Here we see the touchstone that reveals the two types of the human mind—the material and the spiritual. The one finds no interest in anything that does not directly contribute to physical enjoyment; the other rises into the vast domain of ideas. It would be useless to seek to reconcile them; but, fortunately, there are many who will say to themselves that Captain Scott's last message to his country, and to the world, was, in itself, worth the sacrifice of many lives!

Can you imagine a situation in which the greatness of the human soul could be more splendidly manifested than it was by Captain Scott, when, knowing with absolute certainty that in a few hours he and all his companions would be dead, he wrote:

"But, for my own sake, I do not regret this journey."

Captain Scott was right; he has proved that the character of Englishmen has not deteriorated, and his touching, simply-worded appeal for those left dependent by his death and the death of his companions, has aroused the British nation as even the outbreak of a great war could hardly have done.

Contemplating Matrimony

Dorothy Dix Writes an Open Letter to an Aged Widower Who Is Again Considering Marriage, and Who Has Selected as His Bride-to-Be a Frivolous Young Maid About One-Third His Age.

By DOROTHY DIX.

MY DEAR COLONEL: And so you are thinking of essaying matrimony again, and have picked out little Maudie Thompson as a suitable companion for the balance of your life journey.

Salaams, Colonel! I have always respected your bravery, but I never realized until this moment how foolhardily and daredevilishly courageous you are. It is not without reason that you wear a hero's medal pinned above your heart. You will deserve a Victoria Cross, or a Carnegie souvenir, or whatever other red badges of courage they bestow on those who display a great personal bravery in the face of imminent danger on your marriage day, for no man ever leads such a forlorn hope as he who leads to the altar a girl young enough to be his granddaughter.

To expect such a marriage to turn out happily is to demand the impossible of nature. The flowers of spring never wreath the ice crags of Winter. Young feet and old never march to the same tune. Age and youth have different thoughts, different ideas, different aspirations. How, then, shall the old man and the maiden walk hand in hand in marriage?

You say you are lonely in your great house. You desire companionship. You want the face of a woman smiling at you across the breakfast table, and some voice other than your admirable servants to welcome you when you come home.

That is natural and right, and I, for one, am an ardent advocate of second marriage. The young may marry or not, as they please. They can find amusement enough outside of their homes.

When Wearied of Frivolities of Life, Marriage Is Only Panacea

But when a man and woman get to the age when they have wearied of theatres and restaurants, and bridge parties and dinners, and their own fireside looks better to them than any other spot on earth, then they need a husband or wife to share that solitude of two.

And they need a home of their own, not to live around with their sons and daughters, always on their p's and q's for fear that they will offend some touchy daughter-in-law, or cantankerous son-in-law who bristles with feelings as a porcupine does with quills.

Every middle-aged man and woman who is able to support a wife, or a husband, should get married, but there should be a benevolent commission with arbitrary matrimonial powers appointed by the government to pick out a suitable mate for the afflicted party and see that she or he was of appropriate age, character and habit.

For when we hear the last call for dinner in the matrimonial dining car, Colonel, there is something that makes us all, both men and women, want to order nothing but squab chicken. And, believe me, that's an indigestible morsel for those who have arrived at the years of indiscretion. Still, there are those who try it and risk the consequences. Look at the rich old men who marry debutantes! Look at the old women who kidnap baby boys for husbands! And look at how soon they have to send in a hurry call for Doctor Divorce!

Of course, it's all easy enough to understand. The older we get the more the wonder and the glory of youth appeal to us. The more atrophied our emotions the more alluring the enthusiasm of the young. The deader our interests in things the more we try to borrow the interests of the young.

Oh, it isn't hard to see why youth attracts age!

But—and it's a big exception—what age forgets is that it does not attract youth. It repulses youth. Age just of itself is hideous, loathsome to the young. There is something about the decaying fish, the failing faculties, the very disillusions of age that fill the young with the same horror they have of the tomb.

Age gives itself to youth, but youth always has to be bought by age. Even our children's attentions are largely a matter of purchase, and the more that we can do for them the more certain we are of their dutiful devotion. When it comes to marriage it is only the rich who can persuade Cupid to overlook the difference in years. You never hear of a young girl falling in love with a poor old man, or of a young man entreating a poverty stricken old woman to be his bride.

Warns Against Union of Age with Irresponsible, Giddy Youth

I entreat you, Colonel, to dispassionately consider the chance of happiness that you have in marrying a girl like little Maudie Thompson. She is sweet and twenty, and her feet just won't behave when the band plays the turkey trot. She is mad for clothes, mad for pleasure, mad to run about and see things, and to have the luxuries that she has been too poor to possess.

You are—ahem—old enough to know better. You have rheumatism in your knees so that you creak as you walk. You have been everywhere, you have seen everything, and what you now desire is to sit down peaceably and quietly and enjoy the little span of life that is left to you in a well-earned rest.

Of course, you are very sure that Maudie is marrying you for yourself alone, and that she and that hungry family of hers have no eyes on the present pickings and your future will. But do you imagine for a moment that Maudie is marrying you to sit at home of an evening and play cribbage with you, or to nurse your gout, or to listen to your reminiscences of the Civil War?

Not at all. What she's planning to do is to have a box at the opera, and the dinners she will give, and the parties she will go to, and the jewels and the clothes she will have. That's the price she figures on for being an old man's darling. You think you can control her, but age has not the strength to struggle with youth, and the old husband is as wax in the hands of the pretty young wife.

Youth must have its fling, and if you marry a young girl you must be content to drag your old bones around to entertainments of nights when they are aching to be in bed.

An Old Man's Marriage to a Young Girl Is Only Senile Dementia

You must see your young wife giving to young men the smile she will never have for you. You will be torn with the futile jealousies and suspicions of age, and you will be bored—oh, Colonel, how you will be bored with the companionship of a child who does not know one thing that you know, and regards all of your opinions as fossilized.

For an old man to marry a young girl, Colonel, is nothing but senile dementia. Don't commit it. Marry a woman of suitable age to yourself, one who has her own twinges of rheumatism and who is interested in red flannel instead of lingerie, one who has been about until she is glad to put on easy slippers of an evening and sit my the table and read, instead of going to balls; one who, like yourself, knows what has gone before, and with whom you can say, "Don't you remember?"

Each age to its own, Colonel. Keep in your own class, and your individual summer romance will be as beautiful as your Springtime one, but when Springtime and Autumn try to mix up we get matrimonial blizzards.

DOROTHY DIX.
